Exciting Exchanges Explained At Lebanon Farm-City Banquet

During the recent Farm-City Banquet at the Lebanon Expo Center, Agriculture Secretary Samuel Hayes and Farm Show Director Dennis Grumbine presented the Century Farm Award to Arthur and Sara Jane Krall, who own a 120-acre dairy in south Annville area. NORTH CORNWALL (Lebanon Co.) — "We do need to learn to work together," said emcee Arletta Schadler at the recent Farm-City Banquet in the Lebanon Expo Building.

The Farm-City program, she explained, is designed to make people aware of the relationship between agriculture and business, the importance of agriculture to the economy, and to highlight that we have an agriculture economy that coexists with the business economy, said Schadler.

A crowd of more than 600 people attended the banquet, the seventh in the Lebanon Expo Building and the 20th in recent history in Lebanon County. Lebanon County hosts 1,000 farms which generate more than $186 million in agricultural products. Agribusiness adds an additional $86 million in payroll, said Schadler.

Schadler also called attention to the fire at Kutztown Bologna Products which damaged the facilities and destroyed the pork chops and bologna slated to be

Lancaster DHIA Has Banner Year

EVERETT NEWSWANGER

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The management team and farmer directors reported another prosperous year for Lancaster DHIA at its annual meeting Tuesday at the Good 'N Plenty Restaurant. In the manager's report, Jay Mylin said cows on test increased by 20,000 this year to a total of 120,000 cows in 2,000 herds in Pennsylvania and Maryland. Somerset and Blair counties were added this year.

"The dairy industry continues to change at a rapid pace," Mylin said. "Herds are getting larger and production is climbing. The average herd size is up 3 cows, to 66 cows, for all herds we service. Production is up 400 pounds per cow, to 21,062 pounds per year. We service 50 herds of over 200 cows, many with electronic I.D. and milking recording systems. Milk weights are transferred electronically from the dairymen's computer to Raleigh Processing Center."

Steve Hershey, president, said the growth from 1,085 herds in 1992 when the organization was formed to the 2,050 herds today would not have seemed possible. "And we are not just picking up large herds," Hershey said. "We have added many small herds that were never on test before."

After giving the history of how the association came to provide service in 15 counties, Hershey said the future is bright for the association because of strong management and a focus on the technicians.

In the lab committee report Rodney Denlinger reported that a new piece of equipment has increased the ability to process the increasing number of samples going through the lab. And in other business, Denlinger presented the board's recommendation that the by-laws be changed to limit director terms to a total of 3 5-year terms. The recommendation passed.

Clair Oberholtzer, treasurer, reported total assets at $273,426.81 with total income for the year, $2,045,219.59; cash in the bank of $17,695.64; a cer-

The Millers care for about 100 colonies of bees near Manheim. Kelly and Tim, who began managing beehives in 1994, went through several hives early on, but learned how to become experienced beekeepers. The cold, wet spring posed some challenges this year, too. The Millers are pictured on the lawn of their home near Manheim with children, Caleb, 7, standing; Kelly holds Angela, 2 and Julia 4; and Tim holds Elizabeth, 5. Delmarva Broiler/Fryer

ATLANTA, GA.
December 6, 2000
Report Supplied By USDA

Movement of ready-to cook whole birds was again noted as seasonally light to moderate. Seller offerings remained readily available and competively priced. Live supplies were mostly moderate; weights were in a full range of light to heavy. Processing schedules were moderate, instances moderately heavy. Less than trucklot asking prices were 1 cent lower at 52 to 66 cents. Trade sentiment was mostly weak. In the parts complex, seller confidence was building where inquiry for bone-in breasts was increasing. Other items were at least adequate for the light to fair and mostly cautious buying interest.

POULTRY GUARD™ LITTER AMENDMENT

New Poultry Guard™ Litter Amendment is a unique activated clay that delivers consistent ammonia control without the handling inconvenience associated with other poultry litter treatments.

Unlike these other treatments, Poultry Guard Litter Amendment is easy and convenient to apply and needs no incorporation or activation. Fewer application variables mean more consistent performance. In addition, Poultry Guard can be applied up to five days before bird set, whenever it's convenient for the grower.

Using Poultry Guard Litter Amendment Is As Simple As...

Apply
Simply spread over poultry litter.
- No incorporation
- No moisture activation
- No complicated instructions for heating and ventilation in conjunction with application

Bird Set
Poultry Guard can be applied when it's most convenient, up to five days before bird set.
- No application timing headaches between clean out and bird set
- No last minute application after equipment has been lowered

Control Ammonia
Poultry Guard will deliver immediate and long-term ammonia control and give birds a healthier growing environment.
- No more dangerously high levels of ammonia to stunt growth

You be the judge! We are confident this litter amendment will improve your poultry and your profits.

Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO
December 6, 2000
Report Supplied By USDA

Export interest and weather continued to drive the markets today. Wheat mixed. Corn mixed, mostly 1 to 3 cents lower with So. Iowa up to 12 cents lower. Sorghum 3 to 6 cents lower. Soybeans 3 to 7 cents higher.

Wheat bids were mostly lower, pressured by lack of fresh export orders and snow forecast for winter wheat growing areas. Winter wheat growing areas need snowcover as colder temperatures are forecast for next week.

Some export interest from Pakistan, limited declines. Kansas City wheat traded sharply higher due to fund buying on the Board.

Corn bids moved slightly lower on ideas USDA will cut export estimates next week. Some good overnight sales to Taiwan underpinned bids.

Sharp gains were also seen in soybean pits, supported by improved export demand this week with Taiwan's overnight purchases and indications that China bought up to 5 cargoes of US soybeans overnight. Nothing official has been announced, however. Weaker soybean meal demand this week limited advances in bean bids. Brazilian bean planting is progressing with around 84 percent of the crop reported to be in the ground.

The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC THIS WEEK WITH

DECEMBER 11-17, 2000

FULL COLD MOON, DECEMBER 11

HALCYON DAYS

It should come as no surprise that "Halcyon" is among the most popular boat names, gracing the sterns of everything from the smallest day-sailer to the largest yacht. The name comes from a Greek legend about the daughter of Aeolus, god of the winds, who was so upset at the loss of her husband in a shipwreck that she threw herself into the sea According to lore, she was transformed into a kingfisher, called alkyon or halkyon by the Greeks Around the time of the winter solstice, the bird built its floating nest of sticks and bones upon the seas, and the wind was charmed into a period of tranquillity for about two weeks, so that the eggs could be safely incubated This peaceful time, known as Halcyon Days, is what we wish you throughout the holidays

We shall get no rest 'till we get to sea.

Pigs Are Not People

According to Pigs Pen, the November newsletter of the Pennsylvania Pork Producers Council (PPPC), a 300-pound pig was boarded into the cabin of a Boeing 757 and flown nonstop with 200 other passengers on a six-hour flight across the country. The pig's owner convinced the airline that the animal was a therapeutic companion pet, like a guide dog for the blind. Maybe a seeing eye pig, though we have never been cognitive of such an animal before.

The chagrined airline spokesman confirmed that the pig traveled, and officials said it would not happen again. An internal incident report said owners claimed they had a doctor's note that required them to fly with the animal. The report said the pig was described as a 13-pound pig and based on this info, authorization was given.

Baggage charges were waived and the pig was seated on the floor in the first row of first class. Reports vary on the animal's behavior during the flight. One report said the pig slept most of the time and it wasn't until the aircraft taxied into the ground terminal that the porker acted up — "madly run loose through the aircraft and tried to enter the cockpit."

It finally found refuge in the food galley, where it refused to budge. Someone then lured the pig from the galley with food, where the owners managed to drag it out of the aircraft and into the jetway. There it left a mess of you-know-what.

It is left to the Associated Press to report a few days later that the pig flying in first class was a Vietnamese potbellied pig, a breed somewhat known for its use as pets. And the owners deny that the pig behaved badly saying their pig did not run around the plane's isles or anywhere, for that matter.

We would smile at this story and forget it, except it serves as another great example of why pig farmers and the general public often do not agree on what is right treatment of pigs on the farm. This story again brings to the forefront the growing idea that pigs are people and they should be treated as humans, including giving them first-class seats on an airplane.

We believe pigs are most comfortable being pigs. The first-class cabin on a flight to anywhere is luxury accommodations for well-heeled humans. For pigs, it's torture.

Now Is The Time

By John Schwartz

Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Test Homegrown Feed

This past growing year has been a welcome change from last year's drought.

The barns are full of feed. This should bring a welcome reduction in feed bills.

Do not let it become a reduction in milk production as well, reminds Jeff Stoltzfus, Eastern Lancaster County School District adult farmer adviser.

There has been a lot of research and discussion on the feed quality and digestibility of various corn hybrids. In addition, hay quality varies tremendously on the farm this year.

Molds and mycotoxins are also something you need to be on the lookout for in wrapped hay bales this year. Conditions were rarely ideal when hay was made this year. If cows drop production quickly, change your hay source and have your bales tested for mycotoxins.

Farmers need to test their forages often this year. Find and use a good nutritionist. Do not let a bumper crop of homegrown feed turn into a homegrown problem.

To Understand Erosion

Many factors are associated with the amount of soil erosion a storm causes, reports Robert Anderson, Lancaster County extension agronomy agent.

First, the impact of the falling rain on the soil surface will dislodge soil particles and move them in a downhill direction caused by the splash effect. Second, once the soil particle is dislodged from the soil surface by the falling raindrop, any water flowing across the surface will carry the particle with it.

In addition, if the water is flowing fast enough it will also dislodge soil particles and move them downslope. The longer and steeper the hill, the faster the water will move and the more soil the water will take with it.

To Control Soil Erosion

The control of soil erosion involves many factors, according to Robert Anderson, Lancaster County extension agronomy agent.

The first thing that may be done to help reduce erosion is to lessen the impact of the falling raindrop. Many things will help reduce the impact of the raindrop. Plants that are growing have foliage that will intercept the rain droplet and remove much of the energy it has accumulated falling from the sky. The closer the foliage is to the ground, the less impact energy the water will have when it falls off the foliage.

Another way to reduce the energy of the falling drop is to have some type of plant residue on the soil surface. In addition, plants that have a lot of roots near the surface will help hold the soil particles in place and make it harder for the raindrop to dislodge it. Once the impact of the falling raindrop is reduced, the effect of flowing water will need to be kept under control.

The USDA Natural Resources and Conservation Service has been using many practices to accomplish this, including terraces or diversions which shorten the length of the slope that the water is running down and waterways which keep a plant material barrier between the water and the soil. In addition, contour planting, no-till or reduced till planting, and contour strips have done a lot to reduce erosion caused by flowing water.

Often the most critical time for erosion is the winter months when crop cover is at its minimum. Cover crops and residue management are two economical ways to protect soil from erosion during winter months.

Feather Prof's Footnote: "The single defining quality of leaders is the capacity to create and realize a vision."

WHAT SORT OF GREETING?

Background Scripture:
Luke 1:26-38.
Devotional Reading:
Matthew 1:18-25.

"Hail, O favored one, the Lord is with you!"

This was the angel Gabriel's proclamation to Mary in Nazareth.

Note that she was cautious and questioning — as she should have been. Luke tells us that "she was greatly troubled at the saying, and considered in her mind what sort of greeting this might be" (1:28,28). Mary must have wondered just how she was "favored" and how and why "the Lord is with you."

About 40 years ago, in Nuernburg, Germany, I was staying in the guest room of the home of a German lawyer and his wife. Deeply troubled about a family member, I fell into a deep sleep. Some time later I was "awakened" and became aware that there was someone standing at the foot of my bed. Although I could not see the face in the darkness, I "knew" it was Jesus Christ. Suddenly, the bed began to vibrate and a voice said, "Do not be afraid; I am with you."

Common sense tells me that this was a dream and I was not really "awake," but my memory tells me just the opposite. Yet in the Bible God spoke with individuals through dreams and the Hebrews often made no distinction between dreams and "night visions." Like Mary, I, too, wanted to know just "what sort of greeting this might be."

It dawned upon me that I was promised, not that the cause of my anxiety would go away, but that I was not to fear because God would be with me. I will never know just what happened that night, but I received a message I very much needed.

No Guarantee

Neither did Gabriel guarantee her a peaceful, uneventful life as the mother of the "Son of the Most High." He says, "Hail, O favored one, the Lord is with you" (Lk. 1:28). Mary was "favored" by God and is promised that he "is with you." She was to find that receiving the favor of God does not necessarily guarantee a life of everything coming up roses. What is guaranteed is the presence of God in the midst of life's anxious moments.

Gabriel was not put off because Mary was troubled and cautious. Instead, he proclaimed: "And behold, you will conceive in your womb and bear a son, and you shall call his name Jesus . . ." (1:31). Mary rightly was confused by this pronouncement: "How can this be, since I have no husband?"

His reply must have been just as mystifying: "The Holy Spirit will come upon you, and the power of the Most High will overshadow you; therefore, the child to be born will be called holy, the Son of God" (1:35).

You and I probably have a better understanding of Gabriel's message than Mary, for we have heard the Christmas story for as long as we can remember. We know that Gabriel was announcing a unique divine/human encounter that would change the world. We also know, as Mary does not, that the story continues on to a cross on Golgotha and a tomb from which God would raise up his Son in victory. All Mary knew was the promise: "the Lord is with you."

Nothing Impossible

Gabriel tells Mary of the miraculous experience of her "barren" kinswoman Elizabeth, who so late in life conceived a son.

Gabriel's words drive home the assurance of the Lord's message to her: "For with God nothing will be impossible" (1:37).

God can break through all the human and natural limitations. It doesn't matter whether you call it a "miracle" or a phenomenon that we do not understand. God's purpose will be fulfilled.

So, not because she fully understands just what Gabriel is telling her, nor because she knows just how it will all come to be, but because she trusts God she is willing to commit herself: "Behold, I am the handmaid of the Lord; let it be to me according to your word" (1:38). ("I am the Lord's servant; as you have spoken, so be it" — New English Bible).

Perhaps today our response to Gabriel would be: "Put that in writing and I'll have my lawyers look it over." But cautious and questioning as she was, Mary put herself in God's hands. And so can we: so be it!

Group Commends Decision

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board issued a statement on partial pooling of the Class I over-order premium during Wednesday's sunshine meeting in Harrisburg. The board has asked that all interested parties come together to set the percentage level for the pooled premium.

Land O'Lakes Inc. and the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Cooperative, members of the Advantage Dairy Group, commended the board on its decision.

"This is a decision that has been three years in the making," said Land O'Lakes Director of Regulatory Affairs Dennis Schad. He testified for pooling on behalf of the Advantage Dairy Group. "We appreciate the effort that the board has put into both the process and the conclusion."

"The over-order premium has equal value to producers, dealers and consumers," said Steve Graybeal, a dairy farmer from Peach Bottom, Pa. "With producers' pay prices varying so much within the industry, we congratulate the board on moving in the right direction by increasing the premium and deciding to pool it more equitably."

Lancaster dairy farmer Nelson Habecker agreed with Graybeal. "We appreciate the board's compromise to find common ground," he said. "Now it's up to us as an industry to reach a decision on the percentage level. It's a decision that we can all participate in and jointly find resolution."

Ohio Offers Agricultural Business Development Courses

COLUMBUS, Ohio — People developing new agricultural business ideas or diversifying existing operations often wonder if they have what it takes to make these ventures successful.

Two upcoming workshops could provide some answers, said Ron Overmyer, agriculture, natural resources and community development agent for Ohio State University Extension's Agricultural Business Enhancement Center in Bowling Green.

Agricultural entrepreneurs will have an opportunity to explore their innovative ideas and business development skills at two "Tilling the Soil of Opportunity" workshops. A northern Ohio, 11-week course is sponsored by the Ohio Small Development Center at the Bowling Green State University Training Center, the Ohio State University Extension Agricultural Business Enhancement Center and the Ohio Department of Development.

The course will be from 9 a.m. to noon on Tuesdays from Jan. 9 through March 20. The meeting location will be the College Park Building, Room 2, on the Bowling Green State University campus in Bowling Green.

The second set of training sessions is for 10 weeks, from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. on Tuesdays from Jan. 9 through March 31, and will be offered in southern Ohio. Training locations are the Ohio State University Learning Center East in Caldwell, Ohio University in Athens, the Ohio State University Centers at Piketon, Shawnee State University in Portsmouth and the Southern State Community College Southern Campus in Sardinia.

"Participants will learn a practical hands-on approach to solving the problems and issues arising from the development of an agricultural business," Overmyer said.

Some of the questions the courses will address include: "What is the market potential for my product?"; "Who will be the end users?"; "How will the product be distributed?"; "How does the cash flow through the entire operation?"; and "Will I receive a fair return for my time and investment?"

Answering these questions and addressing other important business development issues will help entrepreneurs determine if their agricultural business venture will be economically viable, Overmyer said.

The northern workshop instructors will be Pat Fligor, director of the Ohio Small Business Development Center at BGSU; Overmyer; and Mary Donnell, Ohio State University Extension horticulture agent at the Agricultural Business Enhancement Center. Resource people with specific expertise will participate in selected workshop sessions.

A team of two instructors — one business specialist and one agricultural specialist — will be at each of the five southern training locations. Video conferencing will allow interaction among participants at the five sites.

The $275 fee for the northern Ohio course includes a workbook, snacks, and a parking pass. The registration deadline is Jan. 2. For more information or to register, contact the BGSU Office for Continuing Education, International and Summer Programs, at (419) 372-8181 or toll-free at (877) 650-8165.

The fee for the southern Ohio course is $100 thanks to scholarship funding made possible through the USDA Rural Development Office and the Ohio Department Agriculture. Group discounts also are available. The registration deadline for the southern training sessions is Dec. 15.

Low-Technology Plastic Greenhouses, Called High Tunnels, Could Help Farmers Extend Growing Season For Many Crops

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Buying fresh local tomatoes in June or July and cultivating spinach and other leafy greens year-round could become a reality if farmers adopt a low-cost, low-tech, high-quality, high-yield plastic technology called high tunnels, according to a team of researchers in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"High tunnels can be used as a side enterprise to a larger farm operation, or you could start a large operation using four to six commercial-size high tunnels," said William Lamont, associate professor of vegetable crops. "You can use these for gourmet or specialty crops, or for organic farming. You even can put small fruit trees such as figs inside the structures."

High tunnels are single-car garage-size structures covered with clear plastic sheeting to manipulate soil and air temperatures using the energy of the sun.

During the next five years at Penn State's horticulture research farm, Michael Orzolek, professor of vegetable crops, and Lamont will conduct a series of growth trials in 24 research high tunnels, which are 36 feet long, 17 feet wide and 9 feet high.

The structures are built by stretching plastic sheeting over a tubular frame. Three separate sheets of plastic form the roof and sidewalls of the tunnel. Farmers can raise the sidewalls to ventilate the structure. The endwalls are constructed so the one-piece section has a doorway, but it also is designed so that two people can lift the section and place support poles under it so that a tractor with attachments can be used inside.

As temperatures drop in the fall, farmers can use other plastic technologies inside the structure such as low tunnels (small plastic-covered frames shaped like a Quonset hut), floating row covers made from various plastic polymers, and thermal covers, which use reflective surfaces to trap heat around the plants at night.

Orzolek, Lamont, and other researchers are conducting growing trials for a variety of vegetables, including tomatoes, peppers, potatoes, spinach, lettuce, okra, ornamental gourds, cauliflower, raspberries, blackberries, strawberries and cut flowers.

Commercial-size versions of high tunnels, which are 96 feet long, also protect plants from insects, diseases and wind damage, virtually eliminating field loss, which can run as high as 25 percent for some crops. Construction costs for a commercial high tunnel are from $1,800 to $3,000, compared to $15,000 to $20,000 for a production greenhouse.

High tunnels have been used in Europe and Japan for decades, but Lamont said Penn State has the largest high tunnel research program in the United States.

In addition to the research tunnels, Penn State Cooperative Extension agents in eight counties operate demonstration high tunnels. Within the next three years, Orzolek and Lamont hope to complete a high-tunnel operating manual for producers that can be printed or posted on a Website.

served at the evening's banquet. Dutch-Way Schaefferstown cut the last-minute shipment of 650 smoked pork chops from Hatfield. The Lebanon Chamber of Commerce initiated a collection for donations to be distributed equally among the Kutztown Bologna's employees for the holiday season.

A highlight of the Farm-City banquet is the entertaining accounts of the job exchange.

Michael Deitzler, owner of Dairy Queen West, had several educational experiences during his exchange with Brian Kreider.

Deitzler admitted to putting on a straw hat and listening to country music as he drove to the Kreiders' beef and crop farm in southern Lebanon. Lesson number one, said Deitzler, was that "early" meant 6 or 7 a.m. to the farming community. Arriving at 7:10, learned Deitzler, was late.

He also received a lesson in combining from Kreider.

"I was impressed with her overall concern for the citizens of Lebanon and her promptness in taking care of problems," said Heilinger. Heilinger was also treated to a ride-along with the city police to learn about Lebanon's police programs. As a result of the day Heilinger decided that she would rather farm than become the mayor.

The banquet also included several program updates and awards.

Fifth-grade teacher Blythe Hunsinger gave her impression of her Agriculture In The Classroom workshop. Lebanon County farm Bureau sponsored teachers to participate in the workshop each year.

"I brought back with me a new appreciation for the agriculture community," said Hunsinger. "Our students need to realize they depend on agriculture for their survival." Hunsinger believes her workshop experience will help to enrich her existing curriculum.

Secretary Samuel Hayes and Dennis Grumbine, Farm Show director, presented the Century Farm Award to Arthur and Sara Jane Krall.

Laura Heilinger, Jackie Parker, Brian Kreider and Michael Deitzler entertained the audience as they shared their workday exchange experiences.

"I don't think there's a bigger, more robust Farm-City celebration in the commonwealth of Pennsylvania," said Hayes in his address to the audience. "It's important to come together and recognize the importance of agriculture in Pennsylvania."

The Kralls own a 120-acre farm in the south Annville area, land that has been in the family for 140 years. Arthur and Sara Jane purchased the farm from Arthur's parents 52 years ago and began with 15 cows. Today 70 Holsteins are milked on the farm. Besides a dairy, the farm also hosts alfalfa, corn, rye, and

The Kralls are now retired from full-time farming but help on the farm and are active in leadership in various farm-related organizations.

The sheep-to-shawl auction, featuring a shawl made by the Lebanon Valley Woolsies, ended with a bid for $275 from Darryl and Michelle Grumbine.

"I always looked out into the fields and saw the farmers on their tractors and thought, 'Wow, they're working hard!'" said Deitzler, who was surprised by the "La-Z-Boy recliner, air conditioning, and surround sound," in the tractor's cab. "I was waiting for the projector to pop out so we could watch a movie," said Deitzler.

Brian Kreider's day at Dairy Queen West began with a message on the answering machine "for Cowboy Kreider," said Deitzler. "I'm from the city, and we get up late and we stay up late."

Kreider helped to clean the restaurant and serve the patrons. Although he wore an assistant manager shirt, Kreider quickly learned that wearing the shirt does not substitute for practice in serving ice cream cones. "I couldn't make those nice swirls, so I gave that up," he said. At the banquet Deitzler awarded Kreider's efforts for the day with a large golden soft-serve ice cream cone.

Jackie Parker, mayor of the city of Lebanon, exchanged a day of work with Laura Heilinger, who owns a dairy farm along with her husband Bruce.

Parker spent her first minutes on the farm cheering on a cow in labor. "Because of my son Max I was able to see what it's like to be a mother, and I thought she could use a little encouragement," said Parker.

Parker also brought the herd in from the pasture and assisted in hooking up the cows for milking before she was drafted to clean out the grates.

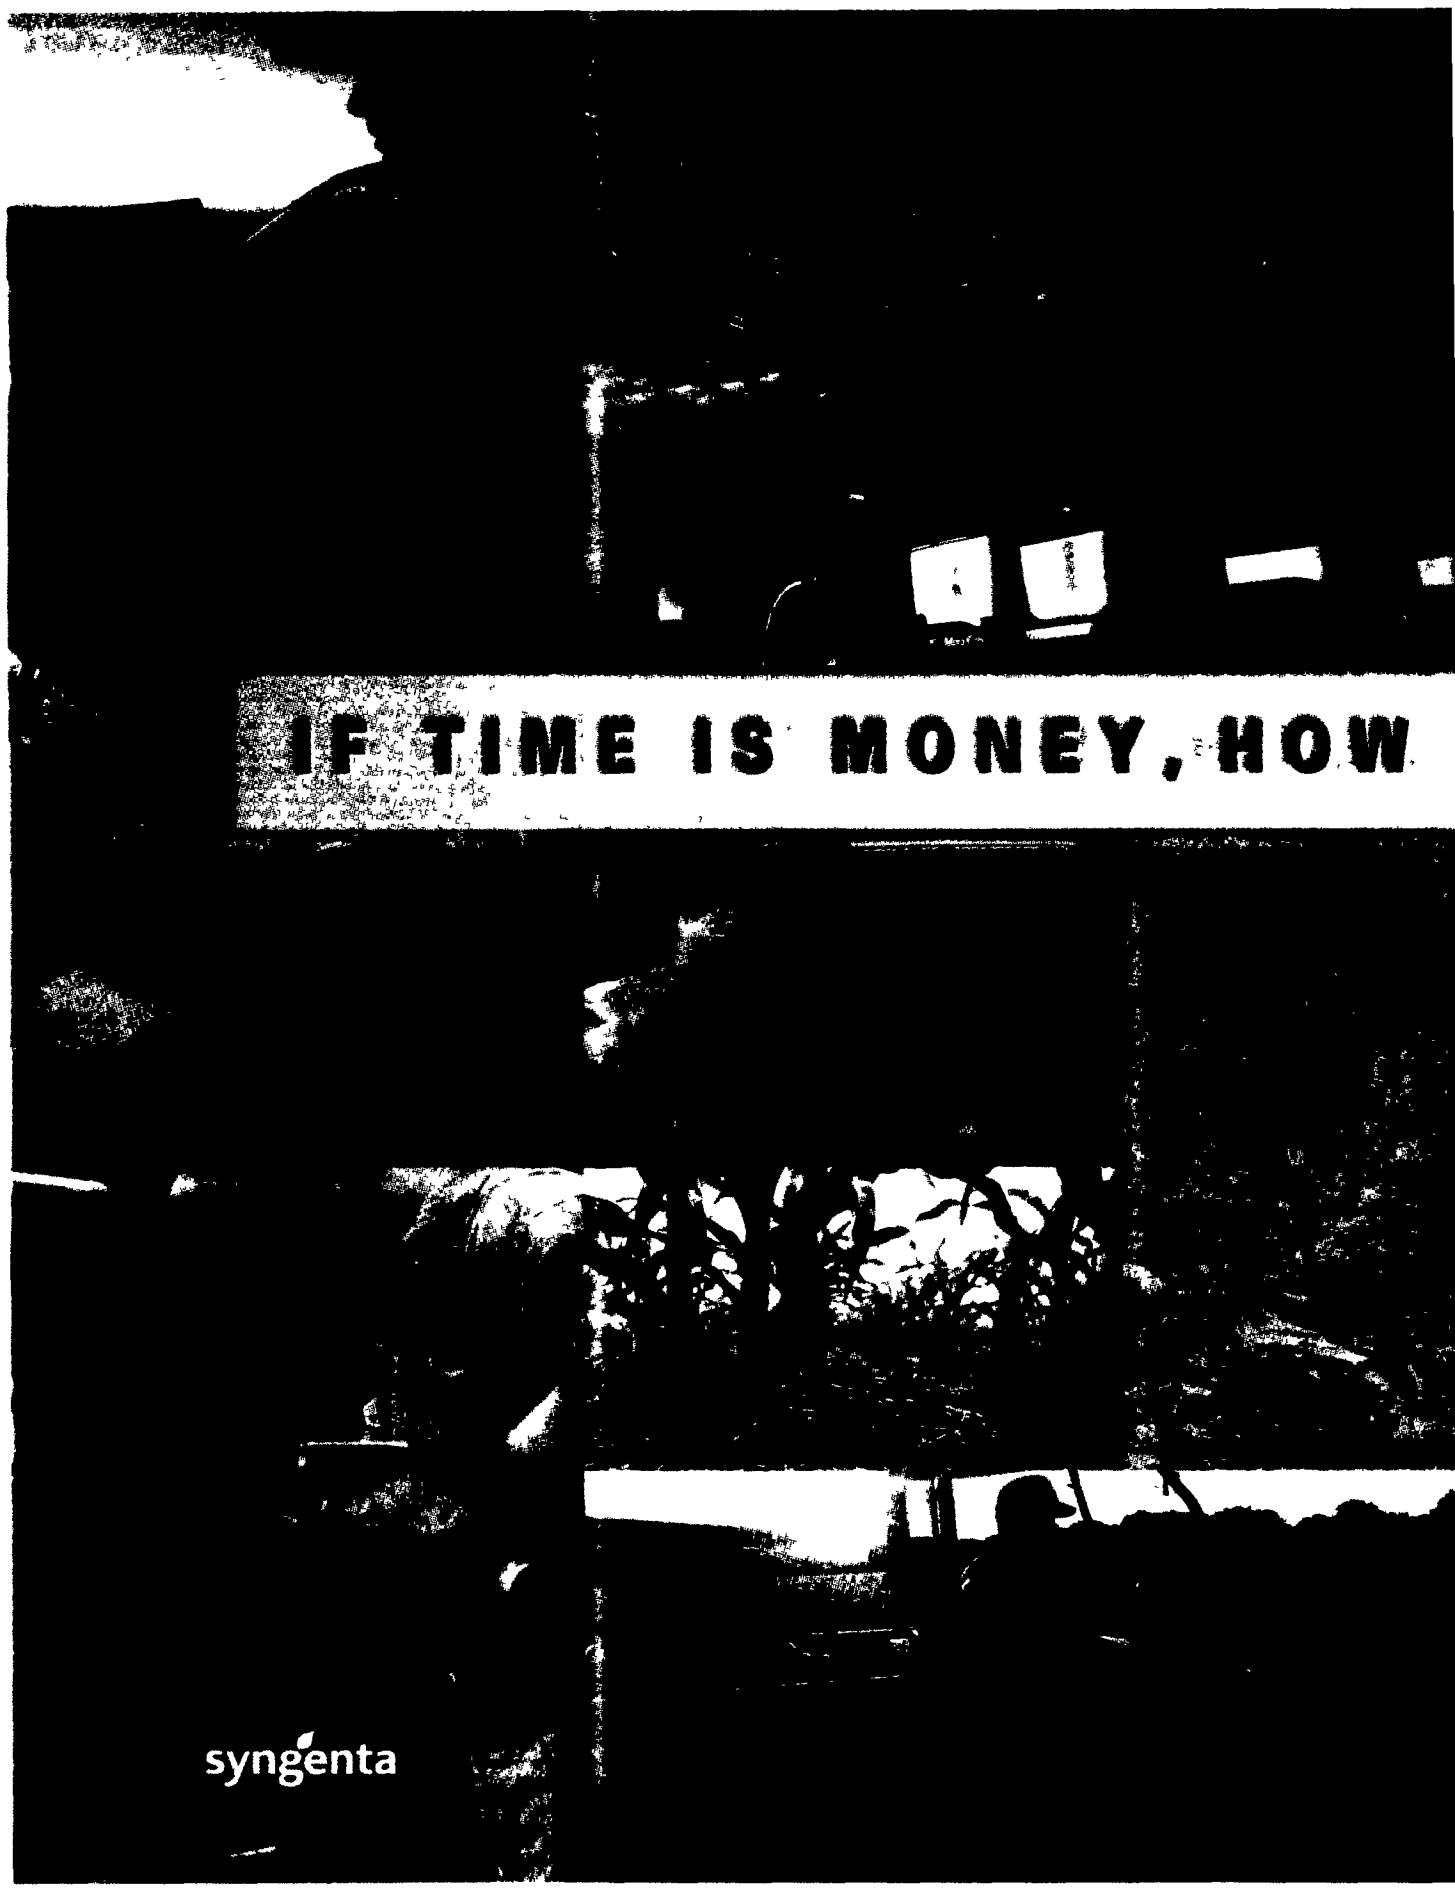
"I was determined that I could do this," said Parker. "Luckily I had a supervisor, three-year-old Emily (Heilingers' daughter), because I didn't realize that the cows behind me are higher than my head. Luckily Emily yelled 'look out' just in time. That one was a little too close," said Parker.

She was also able to pregnancy check several cows. "I don't know what I was feeling but it was a good experience anyway."

I always looked at farmers and thought, 'I'd like that kind of a job, it's peaceful and serene and the cows are great co-workers," she said.

- Parker learned through her experience that "it just takes a special kind of person to be a farmer. It's a lot of hard work and I'm thankful that we have people committed to farming and our community."

Heilinger discoverd that Parker's schedule is full of "meeting after meeting and in between phone calls and paperwork," said Heilinger. Besides attending meetings and fielding phone calls, however, they traveled to the site of a future overpass to get citizen opinion and give input as to where and whether or not to put the bridge over the railroad, Lebanon's major project.



Soybean Prices Rush With 'Mad Cow' Regulation

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Europe's regulatory reaction to control "mad cow' disease could benefit Ohio and Indiana soybean growers who have been enduring low grain prices, said agricultural economist Allan Lines, Ohio State University.

In recent weeks, France, Italy, Greece — with Germany expected soon to follow — have banned meat and bone meal ingredients in all livestock feeds as a precaution against the spread of "mad cow" disease through herds. For soymeal exporters, that's an opportunity to sell more product as European farmers seek out plant-based sources of protein for livestock feeds, Lines said.

Soybean markets have reacted to the regulatory news with two strong upticks since mid-November, raising cash prices by 25 cents per bushel to $4.80 per bushel, Lines said. If sustained, that could beat the estimated average price of $4.65 per bushel for the 1999-harvested crop. It also gets into the upper level of the $4.40-$5 per bushel price range that the USDA projects for the 2000-harvested crop.

For the time being, the price gains have probably topped off, but other increases could result from other countries banning meat and bone ingredients from feeds, Lines said.

There are two caveats to temper any enthusiasm of U.S. producers, however, Lines said. One is European countries' import restrictions on genetically modified (GMO) crop varieties. This could limit trade with the United States where farmers commonly grow these crops in the form of Roundup-Ready soybeans that resist certain herbicide applications.

In comparison, GMO varieties haven't been approved in some countries of South America, which could be a likely source for European imports, Lines said.

The other big "if" is how Europe disposes the meat and bone meal products it has banned, Lines said. Properly processed meat and bone meal can be safely fed to livestock, he said. Although Europe won't use it, other countries needing a cheap protein source may use the cast-off products, which could then dent U.S. soymeal exports to those countries.

In all, Europe ranks second to Asia in terms of agricultural trade with the United States, Lines said. But soymeal would rank high on Europe's list of feed sources because of the great amount produced in the world, particularly by the United States that is expected to have a record soybean harvest of 2.78 billion bushels. Other plant sources of protein are rapeseed and sunflower, which are minor players in the feed meal markets.

Actual U.S. soymeal exports have been running about 17 percent below last year's, while USDA has projected only a 2 percent annual decline.

AHA Recognizes Millers

WOMELSDORF (Berks Co.) — A mother and daughter were each recently recognized by the American Hereford Association (AHA) for producing cows which were named to the national breed registry's Dams of Distinction list.

This is the second consecutive year Sheila Miller received this recognition, and the first time daughter Emilie Miller received the honor.

"I was thrilled last year when I was notified that two of my cows were listed," said Miller. "It was even more exciting to receive the news last month that Emilie's cow has achieved Dam of Distinction honors, along with another Hereford cow from our farm.

"It took me more than twenty years to have a cow listed," noted Miller. "Emilie's cattle made the list in less time! She has built and improved her herd of Hereford cattle during her lifetime, and especially during the past seven years when she has been active in 4-H and FFA. Emilie's first Hereford was a heifer calf her dad and I gave her the week after she was born in 1985. The size of her herd has grown right along with her!

"I'm proud of Emilie's accomplishments, even though it's tough when her cattle beat ours in the show ring," Miller said. "This year, she showed a bred-and-owned steer that was out of her Dam of Distinction cow, Boomer, as her 4-H project and won top honors in the county. Her steer, K-Ci, a STAR Chairman son, was reserve grand champion at Reading Fair, heavyweight at Kutztown Fair, and reserve heavyweight at roundup. She had a great year in the show ring, but I still have her beat when it comes to Dams of Distinction females, at least until next year!"

Miller, along with husband Michael, has been raising purebred Hereford cattle in Berks County since 1980. They own and operate Deitschland Farm in Tulpehocken Township, a 150-acre cow/calf operation.

Craig Huffines, AHA's executive secretary, said of the Dams of Distinction females: "These are the most efficient cows in the Hereford breed. They have met the strictest requirements for early calving, reproductive efficiency, calving intervals no greater than one year, and weaning weight ratios in the top end of the breeder's herd."

The Millers join 607 breeders who produced cows that earned the distinction in 2000. There were 1,969 cows named to the prestigious list for this year, according to AHA officials.

Named to the Dams of Distinction list for Miller is 4-year-old DL Prioritize 9614, a daughter of DS Assemblage (WTK 55Y Bond 75A son) out of a FPP First Priority 28U daughter. In 1999, Miller's Dams of Distinction cows were DL Prior Forecast 9406, a daughter of IGT Forecaster 173T out of a FPP First Priority 28U daughter; and DL Miss Tulpehocken 9412, a daughter of Salunga Ascendant 12B.

Emilie's Dam of Distinction is DS Boomer 3F, a 4-year-old daughter of Remitall Boomer 46B out of DS Bonita 19D, a Bond daughter. Emilie purchased this Boomer daughter from breeder, Dennis Stockdale, Dayton, as a weanling and exhibited her at the Junior National held in Forth Worth, Texas in 1997 and at the Pennsylvania Farm Show in 1998.

In order to be honored as a Dam of Distinction, each cow has to wean a calf born after Jan. 1, 1999; produce at least three initially calve at 30 months of age or less; and have an interval between the first and second calves no greater than 400 days. In addition, 370-day calving interval must have been maintained after her second calf. The longer initial calving interval allows breeders to calve 2-year-old heifers prior to the mature cow herd, have weaning records submitted to the Hereford Performance Program on every calf produced, and have progeny average 205-day adjusted weaning weight ratio of at least 105.

"These are the cows that meet the highest standards of commercial cattle production," said Huffines. "The cows must do her job, but also her owner must manage the herd correctly to give her the opportunity to excel. Only a small portion of active cows are recognized. All heifers have the potential of being a Dam of Distinction but only a small percentage fit the job description of an ideal cow year in and year out."

Other Pennsylvania breeders with Dams of Distinction females for 2000 include Flat Stone Lick, Marianna; Frazier Polled Hereford Farm, Georgetown; Stanley W. Hunt, Slippery Rock; Lee-Mar Farms, Eau Claire; Twin Ponds Farm, McVeytown; Rolling Shade Polled Herefords, East Greenville; Curt Stockdale, Dayton; and Donald Sunday, Dover.

A complete listing of Hereford cows that were recognized and the breeders who produced them is available from the American Hereford Association on its website at http://www.hereford.org.

Successful Employee Retention

With Lancaster's record low 2.3% unemployment rate, workforce needs are a critical issue for most businesses, especially the agriculture industry. Some key reasons why this shortage of employees continues to challenge many business include: an unprecedented time of business expansion and job creation, non-traditional work arrangements and, particularly for the ag-industry, a lack of qualified employees with job skills to work on our farms and in ag-businesses.

Recently The Lancaster Chamber of Commerce & Industry along with the Lancaster County Workforce Investment Board held a Workforce Summit focused on developing solutions to the workforce crisis. One topic covered was "Employee Retention," presented by Ed Krow, SPHR, CHCM from Human Resources Management Associates, Inc.

Krow stressed the value of good employees in your business through pointing out that replacing an employee costs on average 1-2 times the salary and benefit package. Studies show that meaningful and supportive workplaces are more closely linked to productivity than their pay and benefits. One avenue in strengthening the meaningfulness of the workplace is to increase employee involvement. Ask for your employee's ideas and suggestions for problem solving and challenge them with new jobs. Employees that feel more empowered at work are far less likely to become absent or quit. By involving them in setting performance objectives and encouraging self-evaluation of performance, you are helping to build opportunities for a sense of belonging.

Five key steps to building employee commitment that Krow emphasized were the following:

1) Recognize your employee's contribution. This may be easier for a farm or small ag-business to do than any big corporation. You have a better opportunity to gain the one-on-one interaction with just a few employees that a larger business may struggle to accomplish. Keep an accurate record of each employee's work accomplishments. Personally and publicly praise good work, but personally and privately criticize mistakes. Be sure to set objectives in your employees' day to day responsibilities. Reward employee performance with compliments and compensation.

2) Measure your employee's performance compared to defined goals. Base your performance measures on objectives and clear standards. By asking your employee to rate him/herself on their job performance, you are extending the opportunity to find out where they view their performance level. Have a written record of each job incident to refer to when reviewing your employees job performance.

3) Correct performance problems. Show your employees the written performance standards prior to reviewing any problems. Provide guidance and counseling for poor performances and show examples of how their work does not meet the standards compared to others. Provide training and guidance to improve performance. Be sure to document the times you have spoken to employees about their performance.

4) Set new goals with employees to improve performance. Build opportunities for job advancement within your business. Encourage employees to take responsibility for their performance and progress. Be sure to communicate regularly with employees about goals and performance.

5) Give employees what they really want: a positive work environment that fosters growth; compensation based on job performance; respect and trust for their job and abilities, benefits that support and meet personal needs, timely and fair job performance reviews and an action plan based on dealing with development needs.

If you want commitment from your employees, be sure to be committed to them! This will lead to higher levels of employee performance, greater workforce stability, a preservation of a knowledge base, customer loyalty, employee satisfaction and stronger profits.

For more information on employee retention, you may contact Ed Krow at Human Resources Management Associates, Inc. at 717-291-0851. Please send any questions or comments to Brent Landis at The Lancaster Chamber at blandis@lcci.com or 717-397-3531, ext.

Conference Set For Ohio Fruit, Vegetable Growers

COLUMBUS, Ohio — The Seagate Centre and Radisson Hotel in Toledo, Ohio will be the site of a conference for fruit and vegetable growers and direct agricultural marketers, Feb. 7-9.

Growers, marketers, Ohio State University faculty and staff, and exhibitors have worked hand in hand to plan an event that features educational sessions and a trade show.

An addition to this year's conference is a track on greenhouse vegetable production featuring Rick Snyder, nationally known hydroponic tomato expert from Mississippi State University.

The Ohio Fruit Growers Society (OFGS), Ohio Vegetable & Potato Growers Association (OVPGA), Ohio Direct Agricultural Marketing Association (DAMA) and Ohio State University are cosponsoring the event. More than 100 exhibitors will be part of the trade show that allows growers and marketers to learn more about the latest products and services for their businesses.

General sessions will include a "Managing Farm Labor" presentation in which farm employers will share recruiting, hiring, and employee supervision practices. "Crop Protection Products — Availability, Politics and Economics" will have a panel featuring Greggory Storey product stewardship manager with the Buyer Corporation.

Elizabeth Pivonka, president of the Produce for Better Health Foundation, a representative of the U.S. Apple Association, and Gary Stoner with the Ohio State James Cancer Hospital will share how "Fruit + Vegetables = Health" and how growers and marketers can better share that message with customers and the public.

Ron Pelger, produce consultant, columnist for Produce News and former director of produce merchandiser and procurement for A&P/Foodmart, will share consumer and wholesale trend that growers and marketers need to know.

OFGS and OVPGA are conducting an information technology survey of growers that will result in a presentation by Stan Ernst, communication specialist with OSU's Department of Agricultural, environmental, and Developmental Economics. The Ohio Department of Agriculture will explain the new retail food establishment licensing and inspection program that is likely to affect all direct marketers who sell processed foods in addition to fresh fruits and vegetables.

Karen and Chris Watt, owners and managers of 100-acre Watt's Orchard in Albion, N.Y. will be keynote speakers for direct marketers on Feb. 8. Specifically, they will share some of their marketing strategies and how they made the transition from wholesaling to direct marketing and retailing. Their market is located between Rochester and Buffalo, New York. Karen is president of the North American Farmers Direct Marketing Association.

Pam and Dave Bosserd of Marshall, Mich. will be the direct marketing featured speakers on Feb. 9, speaking on their transition from a conventional grain and livestock farm to an innovative farm market. Their farm operation includes retail sales of a wide variety of vegetables, a petting zoo, school tours, greenhouse, and corn maze.

The processing vegetable and truck crops programs will kick off with a vegetable seed quality workshop. Growers, processors, seed company representatives, and Ohio State researchers will share insights on how to define, measure, and manage seed quality.

The tomato-pepper session on Thursday features Andy Clock of Terra/Land-O-Lakes and grower-processor Dan Noble speaking on site-specific management. Richard Derksen with the USDA-Agricultural Research Service will cover new pesticide application technology. The cabbage-cucumber session on Friday features Walter Stevenson, Department of Plant Pathology at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, covering Phytopthora management in cucumbers. Also, Jim Gorny of the International Fresh-Cut Produce Association and Bill Schene of Primus Labs, Inc. will provide up-to-date information on how growers and processors can meet rising concerns about food safety including the use of third party audits.

The Potato program will be Wednesday evening and Thursday with Walter Stevenson handling the topic, "Disease Management for Potatoes." Robin Taylor in Ohio State's Department of Entomology will speak about the role of spray quality on effectiveness of pesticides and Steven Slack, director and associate dean of the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center, will address the importance of using quality seed potatoes.

James Hancock with the Department of Horticulture at Michigan State University will focus on strawberries in the areas of physiology, plasticulture, and producing high yields. Gary Stoner mentioned earlier will review new cancer research results and the cancer preventive effects of berries. Brambles is another area to be addressed in the small fruit session.

Rich Marini from Virginia Tech University will be a tree fruit program featured speaker, discussing his research on factors influencing chemical thinning of apples. Marini will also speak on the topic of peach orchard systems and pruning to reduce thinning and increase fruit size and profit. A representative of the U.S. Apple Association will address apple marketing and apple industry issues from a national perspective. Tree fruit growers will have a half-day combined session with direct marketers.

For more information, contact the Ohio Fruit and Vegetable Growers office at (614) 249-2424 or growohio@ofbf.org.

USDA Announces Fruits, Vegetables Targeted For Purchase

WASHINGTON, D.C. — On Thursday, the USDA announced to the agricultural industry the target list of fruits and vegetables it will purchase in the coming months to bring relief to farmers burdened with critical surpluses and depressed market prices.

Using newly appropriated funds totaling $200 million in the coming fiscal year, USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service will purchase large quantities of apples, black eyed peas, cherries, citrus, cranberries, onions, melons, peaches, and potatoes, as specified in The Agricultural Risk Protection Act of 2000 (Public Law 106-224).

President Clinton signed the legislation on June 20, earmarking the funds for USDA to purchase commodities that experienced severely low prices during the 1998 or 1999 crop years (USDA based its selection on a comparison of prices over the previous five years).

Check out the AMS Website: http://www.ams.usda.gov/fv/fvcomm.htm. The site also offers guidelines for growers and handlers wishing to bid on USDA purchase offers.

Farmers To Sign Up For Helpful USDA Programs

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman recently reminded farmers of pending application deadlines for emergency assistance programs.

"There are many USDA programs that are available to farmers this year to help them through difficult times," said Glickman. "I urge farmers to call or visit their local USDA office to ensure that they know about all the help they may be eligible for and to sign up before the deadline."

Application deadlines for programs previously announced this year are:

2000 Oilseeds Program: $500 million in payments is available to the more than 600,000 producers of the 2000 crops of certain oilseeds.

Eligible oilseeds include canola, crambe, flaxseed, mustard, rapeseed, safflower, sesame, soybeans, and sunflowers. Application deadline is January 12, 2001.

2000 Crop Year Peanut Market Loss Assistance Program: An estimated $61 million is available to partially compensate over 16,000 peanut producers for low commodity prices and increasing production costs. Application deadline is February 1, 2001.

Flood Compensation Program: $24 million is available to producers to help offset losses due to land inundated with flood waters. Application deadline is January 19, 2001.

Wool and Mohair Market Loss Assistance Program: Approximately $11 million in relief is available for farmers who suffered economic loss due to low prices during the 1999 marketing year. Application deadline is December 29, 2000.

2000 Lamb Meat Adjustment Assistance Program: Approximately $10 million is available to producers whose lamb carcasses meet minimum grade specifications. Application deadline is August 15, 2001.

Local USDA Farm Service Agency offices also will begin accepting applications soon for the following programs:

2000 Crop Disaster Program (CDP): Funds will be made available to producers who have been affected by crop disaster. The signup period will begin January 18, 2001.

2000 Livestock Assistance Program (LAP): An estimated $438 million is available to producers for grazing losses due to weather related disasters. The signup period will begin January 18, 2001.

Dairy Market Loss Assistance (DMLA III): Payments to operations that received assistance under DMLA II will be automatically issued to producers later this month. Payments will also be available to new operations and to operations that did not have 12 months of marketing established under DMLA II, and will be based on October 1999-September 2000 marketings. The four-week signup period for these producers will begin in late January, 2001.

1999 Cranberry Crop Market Assistance: Up to $20 million will be available to cranberry producers to help offset low market prices experienced during the 1999 crop year. Farmers will be notified in mid-December concerning the application process which has been simplified by coordinating with existing data held by the Agricultural Marketing Service.

2000 Livestock Indemnity Program (LIP): Up to $10 million will be available to producers who lost livestock due to natural disaster, fire and anthrax. The signup period will begin January 18, 2001.

Extension of the 1999 Livestock Indemnity Program/ Contract Growers (CG-LIP): Program coverage of last year's CG-LIP will be extended through February 7, 2000. The signup period will begin January 18, 2001.

Apple Market Loss Assistance: Up to $100 million will be available to apple producers to help offset low market prices experienced during the 1998 and 1999 crop years. The signup period will begin January 18, 2001.

New 'TEAM BEEF' Program Targets Two Audiences

MIDDLETOWN (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Beef Council and the Penn State University Department of Animal Science will host 'TEAM BEEF' at Penn State University on Feb. 19-22, 2001.

'TEAM BEEF' encompasses two hands-on short courses, BEEF 201 and BEEF 202. BEEF 201, the former BEEF 2000, is designed for cattle producers and will begin on Monday, Feb. 19 and conclude on Wednesday, Feb. 21.

BEEF 202, designed for select chef and restaurant managers, will begin Wednesday evening, Feb. 21 and conclude on Thursday, Feb. 22.

BEEF 201 is a program designed to give cattle producers the opportunity to follow live cattle from the feedlot all the way through to the product that ends up on the consumers plate. Those attending this hands-on short course will evaluate live cattle, including visual and ultrasonic, observe the slaughter process, and grade and inspect carcasses with a USDA inspector and grader.

Attendees will then fabricate the carcass into retail and wholesale cuts. In addition, a variety of guest speakers will be speaking on current issues in today's beef industry.

This two-and-a-half day course offers Pennsylvania beef producers a great opportunity to gain a better understanding of price and value concepts at the feedlot, packing plant, and retail levels.

By the completion of this course, producers should have a better understanding of the vital role they play in meeting the beef industry's goal of providing the consumer with a consistent and quality product and how they can more effectively and efficiently reach that goal.

Space is limited to the first 25 participants, which will be determined on first come, first serve basis. The deadline for reservations is Jan. 19, 2001.

The registration fee for each BEEF 201 participant will be $40 for Pennsylvania producers and $50 for out-of-state producers and agribusiness persons. Each participant will be responsible for paying for hotel accommodations. The Pennsylvania Beef Council will make a block hotel reservation for the group.

To make a reservation for BEEF 201 or for additional information, contact Holly Marshall or Wendall Landis at the Pennsylvania Beef Council office, (717) 939-7000.

Biotechnology Conference To Develop Community Leaders

ITHACA, N.Y. — Biotechnology refers to a wide-ranging group of issues, including genetically modified foods, using animals to grow human transplant organs, cloning, genomics, and more.

Advances in biotechnology have raised serious ethical, moral, legal, and religious issues for some. For others, biotechnology represents a tremendous opportunity to improve the quality of life. On January 17 through January 19, 2001, in Binghamton, New York, a conference entitled "Biotechnology: Progress or Problem?" will explore the varying perspectives on biotechnology, with an emphasis on agricultural biotechnology and leadership development.

The conference is designed for leaders in communities, agriculture, government, academia, and industry who are wrestling with the question of when to say yes and when to exercise caution in accepting, promoting, or implementing new biotechnology developments.

The conference will begin at 2 p.m. on Wednesday, January 17, with several presentations, including a presentation on ethical issues intended to build the knowledge base of participants. After additional presentations on Thursday, January 18, there will be three discussion sessions entitled "Our Future Food: Quantity, Quality, and Choices"; "Benefits and Drawbacks for Small Farms"; and "Environment: Risks and Benefits."

Each discussion session will begin with two speakers that have differing views on the issue. Then the audience will discuss and document their concerns and questions. The results will be merged for all the groups and reviewed the following day. The conference wraps up with a series of presentations discussing consumer decision making, media coverage of biotechnology, and government regulations. The conference ends at 12:30 p.m. on Friday, January 19.

Those that register for the conference are invited to propose a poster or display presentation for a reception Wednesday evening. Posters are intended to show the range of biotechnology research. Posters describing alternatives, concerns, or philosophical perspectives will also be considered.

Conference speakers were chosen to provide background information on biotechnology and to reflect the range of opinions that exist concerning biotechnology. Eighteen speakers will present lectures at the conference.

The registration fee is $145 if postmarked on or before December 27, 2000, and $185 if postmarked after December 27 or at the door.

The conference will be held at the Best Western Binghamton Regency Hotel and Conference Center. For a conference brochure or additional information, contact NRAES, 152 Riley-Robb Hall, Ithaca, NY 14853-5701; phone (607) 255-7654; fax (607) 254-8770; or E-mail nraes@cornell.edu. Conference information is also posted on the NRAES Web site www.nraes.org.

Here Are Tips For Buying, Storing, And Planting Balled Trees

COLUMBUS, Ohio — The tree in your living room this Christmas could beautify the landscape surrounding your house for years to come.

Live trees are an excellent way to remember past holidays, but require a little more planning and care than cut Christmas trees, said Ohio State University Extension forestry specialist Randy Heiligmann.

The live trees, called balled trees because their root system is wrapped in a soil-filled burlap ball, are brought inside the house and decorated like any other Christmas tree. Once Christmas is over they can be planted outside to beautify the yard.

Heiligmann offers these tips to follow before buying a balled tree:

• Decide where it will be planted once it is removed from the house. Remember, most Christmas tree varieties have the potential to grow in excess of 60 feet, so don't plant them where their growth could cause problems.

• Decide how the balled tree will be transported, both by vehicle and into the house, and have a couple people available to help. The combined weight of the tree and root ball will be in excess of 100-pounds.

• Measure the balled tree from the base of the ball to the top of the tree to be sure it will fit in the room you want it. It is usually not desirable to shorten balled trees once they have been purchased.

• Dig the hole where the tree is to be planted before Christmas, when the soil is not frozen. The hole should be one and one-fourth as wide as the ball. Generally, 18 to 22-inches is a safe diameter. It might be good to get the tree and look at the size of the ball before digging the hole. Spread mulch or straw over the dug soil to prevent it from freezing before the tree is planted.

Heiligmann has these suggestions for storing a balled tree before bringing it into the house:

• Keep the root ball moist and handle it carefully to avoid damaging or breaking the ball.

• Store the tree in a shaded area, protected from heavy winds. The outside wall of an unheated garage is an ideal location.

• Wrap the ball with a plastic bag before bringing it into the house to avoid spills.

Once the tree is in the house, follow these tips for care and maintenance:

• The tree should be in the house for only five to seven days. If left inside more than a week, it could begin to lose its winter dormancy and die once taken back outside in the cold. The less time the tree spends in the house the better.

• The ball should not dry out or be over watered. Water the root ball every two or three days. Set the ball in a pan and cover the carpet underneath with plastic or a rug to avoid spills. If the ball is over watered, it will fall apart.

• Do not put the tree in front of a sunny window or near a fireplace or warm register. Reduce the temperature in the room to 65 degrees or as low as comfortable. Use smaller Christmas lights that give off less heat. These techniques help prevent the tree from losing winter dormancy.

When planting a balled tree, follow these rules:

• It's not necessary, but sometimes helpful, to cut holes in the burlap once the root ball is placed in the hole. This may make it easier for the roots to grow out of the ball.

• The top of the ball should be level with or slightly above the soil surface, and the soil dug from the hole should be refilled around the ball. It is important to eliminate air pockets around the ball, so remember to periodically tamp the soil down and make it firm while planting the tree.

• If the weather is warm, water the tree.

• Once the hole is filled, cover the soil with four-inches of mulch in a three- to four-foot diameter circle around the base of the tree. This keeps the soil from freezing and allows the tree's roots to take up water.

• Plant the tree where it will be protected from winter wind. This will keep it from drying out.

Glickman Announces Additional $1 Million To Promote U.S. Lamb

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman recently announced that USDA will begin accepting proposals to fund up to $1 million in competitive marketing and promotion projects under the market promotion funding of the Lamb Meat Adjustment Assistance Measures Program.

On Nov. 15, Glickman announced the initial awards of 15 cooperative agreements totaling nearly $3.85 million under this program. The additional funds were made available to provide a greater opportunity for the lamb industry to make domestic lamb meat more competitive with imported meat.

New or existing programs that focus on marketing, promotion, merchandising, market feasibility analysis, market identification, or value enhancement will be considered for funding.

"These additional marketing and promotion efforts are an integral part of the assistance measures developed at the request of the President to help the U.S. lamb industry achieve long-term, sustained competitiveness," said Glickman.

In February 1999, the U.S. International Trade Commission ruled 6-0 that a surge of low-priced imported lamb meat was causing the threat of injury to U.S. lamb producers. In July 1999, President Clinton announced a three-year assistance package for domestic producers.

The package made $50 million available during the first year and makes an additional $50 million available during the second and third years for production improvements, market promotion, animal health and domestic purchases.

Funding for the promotion projects will be awarded prior to Feb. 1, 2001, with projects to be completed by Sept. 30, 2002. Additional information can be accessed on the Web at www.ams.usda.gov/lsg/201lamb/201.htm.

First On The Scene

ITHACA, N.Y. — The problem of how to respond quickly and effectively to farm accidents is the topic of a publication in NRAES's farm safety series. "First on the Scene," NRAES-12, is intended to enable rural residents and farm workers to make the right decisions in the crucial time between discovery of the accident and the arrival of the emergency medical team.

The bulletin progresses from a description of primary considerations in all accident situations to detailed discussion of specific farm accident scenarios, including those involving machinery, storage facilities, chemicals, and electrocution. A special feature of the 46-page bulletin is the series of "Decision-and-Action Tree" diagrams which lead the reader through the steps which constitute the best response to various accident situations.

Since farm accidents often occur in isolated areas where professional help is not readily available, it is important that people who arrive first on an accident scene understand the hazards present in the farm environment. "First on the Scene," NRAES-12, calls attention to these hazards and discusses how rural residents can help the victim survive without becoming victims themselves.

One important step, the bulletin shows, is to become familiar with all machinery, storage facilities, and chemicals used on the farm. The bulletin also addresses problems commonly encountered in accident situations, such as how to determine whether it is safe to approach the victim, when to go for help, and when to remain with the victim.

Appendices contain a lesson on shutting off diesel tractors and suggestions for first aid kit contents. Included in the back of the bulletin is a form for posting accident reporting information. The bulletin also advises how to communicate effectively with emergency medical personnel.

First on the Scene, NRAES-12, was written by Dennis J. Murphy, agricultural engineering professor at The Pennsylvania State University; John Pollack, executive director of the NYS Rural Health & Safety Council, Inc.at Cornell University; Gary Smith, extension safety specialist at the University of Maryland; Thomas Bean, associate professor of agricultural engineering at The Ohio State University; and Marty Sailus, director of the Natural Resource, Agriculture, and Engineering Service.

First on the Scene, NRAES-12, is available for $7.00 (plus shipping and handling) from NRAES, Cooperative Extension, 152 Riley-Robb Hall, Ithaca, New York, 14853-5701. Quantity discounts are available. The shipping and handling charge is $3.75 for a single copy within the continental United States. New York residents, add 8% sales tax (calculated on both the cost of publications and the shipping and handling charges. For information about quantity discounts, or for a free publications catalog, contact NRAES by phone at (607) 255-7654, fax (607) 254-8770, or e-mail nraes@cornell.edu. Pasture And Watershed Research Receives Money

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Senator Rick Santorum (R-PA) announced recently that he secured $500,000 to conduct research on pasture management, grassland ecology, water quality, and nutrient management research.

The funding was approved by a House-Senate Conference Committee as part of the FY 2001 Agriculture Appropriations Bill. The Agriculture Appropriations Bill, which was passed by the House of Representatives, must still be approved by the full Senate before being sent to the President.

With this funding, the Pasture Systems and Watershed Management Research Laboratory at University Park will evaluate and develop improved management systems for perennial grass and legumes in sustainable bioenergy/bioproduct crop production systems. In short, this research will benefit farms by improving the quality of livestock feed.

"This funding is critical to the health of the environment in Pennsylvania, and it will help to improve the water, land, and air quality of Pennsylvania and its surrounding states," said Santorum. "I am pleased that the conference committee recognized the importance of this funding."

Milk Marketing Board Mandates An Increase

and sold within the state. The $1.40 over-order premium will be in effect for a six-month period beginning Jan. 1, 2001. Therefore, beginning Jan. 1, 2001, the total of the over-order premium and the fuel adjustment premium placed on Class I milk that is produced, processed, and sold in Pennsylvania will be $1.65. This action is the result of a hearing held Nov. 8, 2000.

The Board based its decision on testimony presented at the hearing showing that an over-order premium of $1.40 per one hundred pounds of milk (excluding the $.25 fuel adjustment) responds appropriately to the factors of cost of production, prices received by Pennsylvania dairy farmers, as well as market conditions.

The over-order premium is a dollar amount added to the minimum Class I price to be paid to Pennsylvania dairy farmers that is announced by the Federal Government and the Milk Marketing Board monthly. Pennsylvania has mandated an over-order premium on Class I milk produced, processed, and sold in Pennsylvania since 1988.

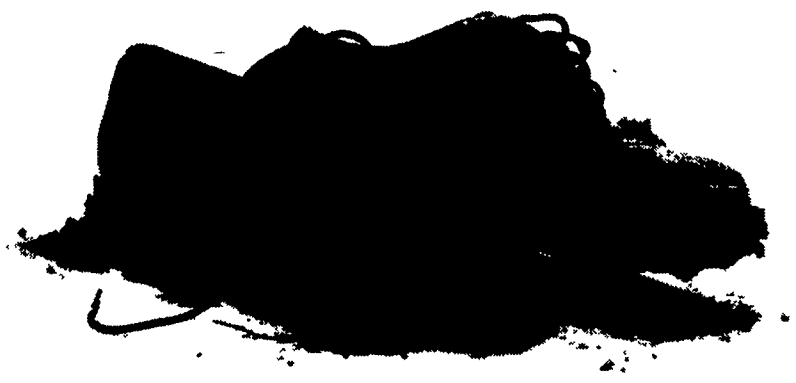
Out standing in your field.



The Agri-specialists from Farmers First aren't a bunch of deskbound bankers waiting around for the phone to ring. We get involved with you. Right where you live and work. We lend the money farmers need to keep growing. And, we can help your business in a lot of other ways, too. We talk the talk. And we walk the walk (wherever that might lead us).

USDA Announces Tentative Final Decision On Class III, IV Price Formulas

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The USDA recently announced a tentative final decision to amend the current Class III and Class IV pricing formulas under federal milk orders.

This decision is based on testimony and data presented at a public hearing May 8-12, 2000, in Alexandria, Va., to consider proposals submitted by the industry to change the formulas.

The decision provides for separate butterfat prices for milk used in Class III (cheese) and Class IV (butter and dry milk products) based on the value of butterfat in cheese and butter. The manufacturing (make) allowance for cheese is proposed to be reduced slightly, from 17.02 cents per pound of cheese to 16.5 cents. The make allowance for dry whey, also a factor in calculating Class III value, would be increased from $0.137 to $0.140 per pound of dry whey.

The make allowances used in calculating Class IV value are proposed to increase slightly, from 11.4 to 11.5 cents per pound of butter and from 13.7 cents to 14 cents per pound of nonfat dry milk.

The proposed changes are expected to have limited impact on returns to dairy farmers.

Interested persons have until Feb. 5, 2001, to file comments in response to the tentative decision. A tentative final decision is being issued because the Congressional deadlines of Dec. 1, 2000, for publication of a final decision and Jan. 1, 2001, for effectuating order amendments do not allow enough time to issue a recommended decision and receive and consider comments before issuance of a final decision.

USDA will determine whether dairy farmers approve the amended orders.

The following market administrators can provide additional information about the decision.

NCBA Says Access to Market Information Will Aid Cattle Producers

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A new USDA rule fought for by U.S. cattlemen will help producers make better-informed business decisions, the National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA) said recently.

USDA today released its final rule that puts mandatory price reporting in place, making more market information available to the industry.

"This is a major step that will improve the market negotiating position of family farmers and ranchers," said NCBA President George Hall, a cattle producer from Mustang, Okla. "It gives producers a leg up without stifling the marketplace."

"Price reporting will greatly increase access to marketing information, much of which has never before been available to producers," Hall said. "Armed with more information, cattlemen can improve marketing decisions."

Mandatory price reporting is the result of a long-term joint effort between NCBA, state cattlemen's organizations and other segments of the beef industry to find a program that would best meet cattle producers' needs. Congress approved NCBA-backed legislation in 1999.

USDA initially will publish national reports and will then phase in state and regional reports as market information is gathered. The information will be available through USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service at http:/www.ams.usda-.gov/lsg/mncs/index.htm, and NCBA has plans to post it on the www.beef.org Web site.

The reporting covers price, volume and terms of trade for fed cattle and boxed beef. Livestock packers, product processors and importers that slaughter an average of 125,000 cattle, 100,000 swine, or 75,000 lambs per year, are required to report.

USDA is working to finalize a rule that mandates price reporting for exports. The proposed rule calls for meat exporters to report volume for all fresh and frozen meat, and USDA will collect and publish the information. A pilot program to use scanner data to report retail beef prices is also underway.

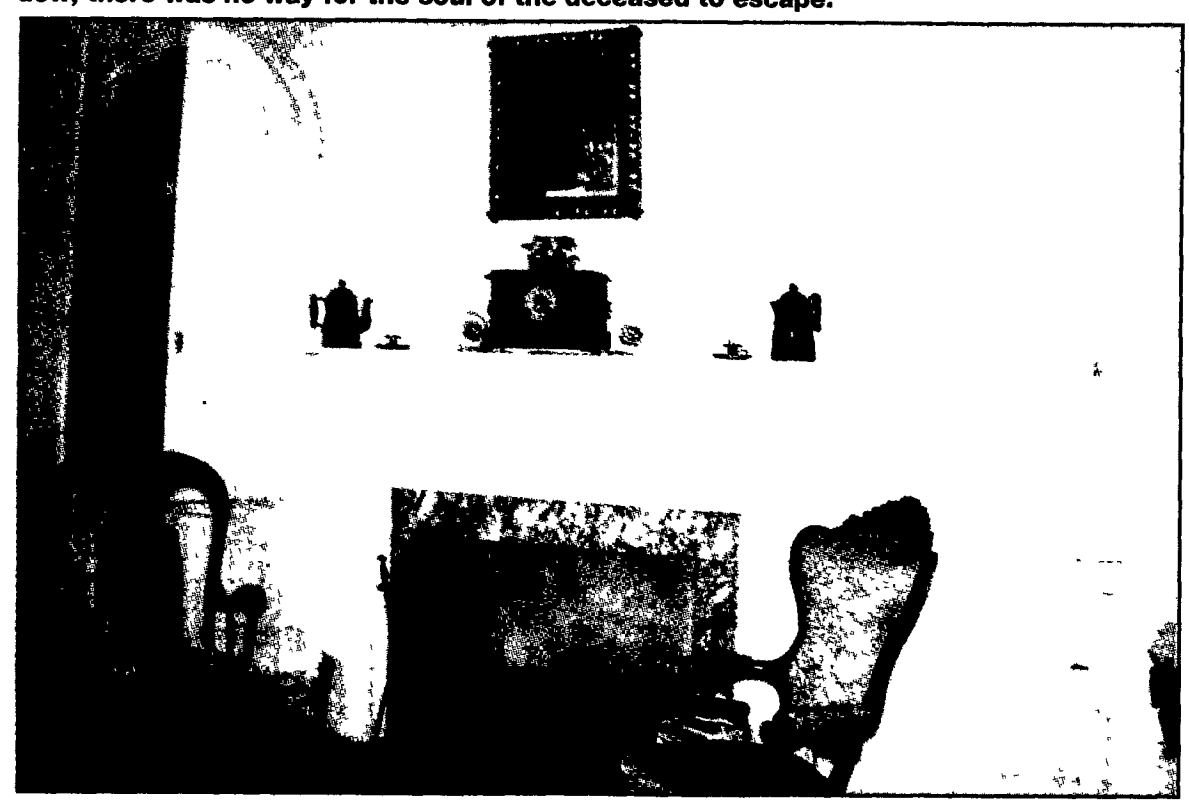
Fisher Homestead Showcases Living History

The Fisher Homestead is a historical landmark of the Oley Valley. The Georgian-style home built in 1801 features a 13-room interior with two 8-foot wide hallways, six fireplaces, and the finest details of master carpentry.

Frank and Hilda Fisher have retained the historical significance of the home with its walk-in fireplace yet added modern conveniences. The "elens fenster," or soul window, which is a small window at the side of the walk-in fireplace, is reported to have been kept open in accordance with the superstitious belief that if there were no open window, there was no way for the soul of the deceased to escape.



Elaborate wood carvings are different in each of the six fireplace mantels and the flanking built-in closets that appear in the mansion.

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

OLEY (Berks Co.) — It's difficult to tell where history begins and where it ends at the 1790 Fisher Homestead, where living history continues to unfold around Frank and Hilda Fisher.

The feisty 80-year-old Hilda is a long-time compiler of historical landmarks for the Berks County Historical Society. But she has made plenty of history herself. She received a national award from President Reagan for her work with the National Register of Historical Places, and numerous county awards for preservation of historical places and graveyards. Recently Hilda was named Ag Women of the Year for the county.

Travelers on Route 662 north of Oley are intrigued by the handsome Georgian-style home and the barn and out buildings of the Fisher Homestead.

The house is modeled similar to the mansions in the British Isles. The outer walls of the house are constructed with 18-inch thick limestone. The 13-room interior features two 8-foot wide halls, six fireplaces with intricate wood carvings, numerous built-in china closets, chair rail panels, friezes, and cornices such as a miniature of a Corsican general riding his horse.

The master bedroom or bridal chamber on the second floor has the most elaborate wood carvings, which at one time was desired by the DuPonts of Longwood Gardens as a summer room.

Hilda has an abundance of stories to accompany many of the home's features. For instance, each window in the house has 24 panes of 8x10-inches of bubble glass. It is said that someone viewing a crime through the window could not be considered a viable witness because the glass distorted the scene.

Still standing is the stone barn, used to provide accommodations for the horses of travelers on the way to Philadelphia during the late 1700s.

The Fishers have compiled an extensive history of their ancestors who inhabited the property before them. At times, the mansion housed four generations of Fishers. Frank and Hilda married in 1942 and moved into the house in 1945.

Uncommon for that era, both Frank and Hilda had graduated from high school. Hilda completed her education at the Kutztown State Teachers' College and taught school two years before marrying.

Frank credits his vocational agriculture teacher for instilling different farming methods. While neighbors were skeptical of "newfangled" ideas, the vocational teacher garnered Frank's dad's respect when he helped shock wheat during an unexpected visit.

Through this newly-introduced ideas, Frank said students learned to feed cattle rations, to keep lights on in the chicken house in order to induce chickens to lay more eggs, and to fertilize wheat, corn, and oats.

He remembers when the family purchased one of the first Fordsom tractors.

"But tractors aren't what they are today," Frank said. The family's first tractor required "one to cook before the tractor did when starting it," he said of the laborious effort.

The move to the Fisher mansion had not been anticipated when they first married. Hilda recalls that on their wedding day, Frank's grandparents, who lived on the property, did not attend their wedding because it was butchering day. The bridal pair decided to drop by the homestead after the wedding. Because of bad weather, Frank carried the bride across the threshold, a custom associated with a couple first moving into their own home.

"We never knew that someday we would live here," Hilda said. Eventually, the couple had two sons, Steve who married Marjorie Werner, and Gery who married Carol Falter, and a daughter Eloise.

Hilda returned to teach about 13 years after the couple had their first child. Frank continued to farm 152 acres and was a school director for 20 years.

Farming methods changed dramatically during Frank's farming years. He recalls having free-range chickens in every building on the property.

"I had to hunt eggs and spend a whole night grading them to take them to the Philadelphia market the next day," Frank said.

> "We never lived on Easy Street, but we lived on Happy Street."

While farming isn't as labor intensive as those days, Frank considers it more difficult to make it financially nowadays.

"Today corn prices are only half of what they were when I started. We must preserve farm land but we must also preserve the farm family to continue to exist," Frank said. "Market prices must align with the standard of living."

This is the first year that Frank is no longer farming. His son Steve retired from his job to take over crop farming.

The Fishers have always made vacation a priority. They have also been active in the International Farm Youth Exchange, with their sons going to Iran and Australia. The family hosted two exchangees from Turkey and one from Iran.

While the characteristics of old homes are generally admired today, it wasn't always so. During the 1950s-1960s, many farmhouses were modernized, destroying such features as walk-in fireplaces and brush-painting techniques on wainscoting and doors.

Fortunately, the Fishers have always valued the historical significance of the property. "We don't want to change things," Hilda said of the home's unique features. For example the original 1830's French wallpaper is still on the living room ceiling. Although aged, the decorative paper maintains the elaborate detail of that era.

The Fishers pointed out a

Although many of the home's original furnishings had been passed down to various other families over the years, the Fishers have been able to purchase or

On Being a Farm Wife (and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

What makes folks happy?

Good health? Money? Family and friends? Pleasurable job?

Or is it those "warm, little fuzzies" that do more to keep us upbeat through our daily routines and the challenges that get thrown down like gauntlets through our days of dealing with life.

The newspaper we recycle for heifer bedding — not shredded, but simple tossed in "as is" for the heifers to dance and cavort through, after friends and neighbors drop it off here (neatly tied or bundled, not loose!) — sometimes include neat tidbits of printed matter. I toss the papers, by hand, around the bedding pack; usually it's just daily newspapers, but occasionally a gem of printed material falls out.

Literally falls out, that is. Like a morning last week, when a slender, book-mark type of paper dropped to the concrete floor of the heifer pen walkway. I picked it up and found a list of "happy thoughts" — which appeared to have been an addition to a church bulletin tucked in with someone's old newsprint.

The "happy thoughts" made me smile. Included were things like: a hot shower, giggling, finding a $20 bill in your coat from last winter, making new friends, and spending times with old ones.

Running through sprinklers. Hot chocolate, swinging on swings, watching the sunset. Lying in bed listening to the rain falling outside. The beach. Getting mail. Accidentally overhearing something nice said about you. A care package, laughing at yourself, your first kiss.

Playing with a new puppy. Falling in love for the first time. A good conversation. No lines at the supermarket, hot towels out of the dryer, waking up and realizing you still have a few hours to sleep.

Laughing for no reason at all, laughing at an inside joke, laughing so hard your face hurts. Chocolate milkshakes.

(I liked the way it included so much laughing. And chocolate.)

Mentally, I began adding some personal "happy thoughts" to this fairly-generic list.

The sound of farm equipment returning from the fields after dark. An unexpected check in the mailbox. Stepping from our unheated upstairs into the toasty-warm kitchen at 4 a.m. A brisk walk under a starry sky on a chilly winter evening. Seeing how cozy the house looks from a distance lit up at night.

Flowers. A kitten's soft fur. A card, note or postcard from a friend or relative. Outdoor Christmas decorations shining in the night. Toy trains. An orange, full moon peeking up from the eastern horizon.

A real, live person answering the phone when you contact a business with a need or a problem. Hot soup. That flash of drop-dead red when a cardinal visits the bird feeder. A walk through fresh snow. The "ping" of a canning jar sealing.

Crawling into bed between sheets line-dried in the sunshine. A spur-of-the-moment picnic. Reading a book to a child. Heifers cavorting through the pasture the first time they're turned out into new grass. The smell of fresh-cut hay. Candlelight. An owl hoo-hoo-hooting overhead late at night. Having the checkbook balanced.

A newborn baby calf. Finding an item I really need on sale. Kneeling on earthy-smelling fresh soil to plant seeds. Sweet corn cooked direct from the garden. A train whistle in the distance. The first-home-grown tomato. Looking at old family photos.

Waterfalls. Smiles. Babies. And, not to forget, chocolate.

We could go on and on. But, I was especially mindful of the bookmark's bottom line.

Getting out of bed every morning and thanking God for another beautiful day!

Grazing Or Traditional Dinners?

A friend who is diabetic said eating a lot of small meals throughout the day is a good plan even for people who don't have diabetes. Is there any truth to that?

Some studies do suggest that more (but smaller) meals throughout the day can increase metabolic rates and allow nutrients to be absorbed more efficiently.

But there's a bigger issue lurking in your question, and it's this: Basically, a healthy diet is a healthy diet, whether you have diabetes or not. People with diabetes often contact a registered dietitian to help with individualized meal planning — there's no one "diabetes diet." But basic guidelines for people with diabetes are the same for everyone else. Here are some tips from the American Dietetic Association:

— Eat five fruits and vegetables a day. Want a snack? Eat a piece of fruit. Include a small bag of raw vegetables with your lunch. Increase the vegetables in soups, casseroles, stew or stir-fried dishes.

— Eat six or more servings of starch each day. For breakfast, choose dry cereal with nonfat milk or whole-grain toast. Add beans to chili, soups or casseroles. Include potatoes, pasta or rice with your meal.

— Eat sugars and sweets only in moderation. Have a favorite satisfier for your sweet tooth? Indulge — but only once or twice a week. Have a hankering for dessert? Split it among one or two others to satisfy your craving but limiting the sugar, fat, and calories.

— Eat less total fat. Saute vegetables in cooking wine or flavored vinegar instead of oil. Use less, or choose low-fat or fat-free versions of cream cheese, salad dressing, mayonnaise, or sour cream.

— Eat less saturated fat. Choose lean cuts of meat. Think of meat as a side dish instead of the main course. Prepare meat and fish by grilling, broiling or poaching. Choose low-fat or nonfat dairy products.

If you follow these guidelines, you'll have a healthful diet whether you choose to "graze" throughout the day or eat a more traditional meal pattern.

Lighten Up Your Holidays

Special foods are a part of many holiday traditions. But, they can also present a challenge to maintaining a healthful diet. New research from the National Institutes of Health shows many overweight Americans can expect to gain an average of 4-5 pounds between Thanksgiving and New Year's Day.

Researchers determined two main factors influenced participants weight gain: level of hunger and level of activity. This time period is often filled with many hectic errands, parties, shopping, and other activities that often decrease time for exercise and balanced meals.

While starting a weight loss plan may not be a realistic goal during the holidays, maintaining weight or avoiding further gain certainly can be. The following is a list of suggestions to help keep your holidays light and bright.:

• Learn the Three and One Shuffle. Tune up your body to burn more calories. For every one minute spent at the table, walk three.

• Eat holiday colors. Red — cherry tomatoes, red peppers, radishes, apples, strawberries. Green — broccoli, spinach, kale, kiwi, cabbage, and green pepper. Fruits and vegetables are loaded with vitamins and minerals, and the majority have no fat.

• Party goers, plan ahead. If you can bring something to the party, plan a low-calorie treat with fruits and vegetables. This way, you can be assured of at least one healthful selection. The fiber in them will help fill you up, not out.

• Take the punch out of your drinks. Alcohol is like a kissing cousin to fat; it contains 7 calories per gram, and fat has 9 calories per gram. Try mixing sparkling water with fruit juice for bubbles without the bite.

• Shake the salt habit. Taste your food before you season with salt. Try lemon, lime, or sampling the wide variety of herbs with different foods. Or, give yourself a month vacation from salt to really taste the natural flavors of foods. (It takes your taste buds this long to adjust). As a result, you may reduce your blood pressure in the process.

• Potassium, calcium, and magnesium may also decrease high blood pressure. Many fruits, vegetables, and dairy products are excellent sources of potassium, magnesium is found highest in green vegetables and grains, and calcium in dairy products.

• Attention all shoppers! Eating out can be a challenge — be alert for menu descriptions that signal high fat traps: crispy, golden brown, fried, sauted, creamy, cheesy, and jumbo supreme.

Lights include: broth-based, grilled, stir-fry, and baked.

• Relax! Holidays often bring more hassles and stress. Many people use foods to comfort them and reduce anxiety.

If this includes you, keep apples, carrots, and whole grain crackers on hand for crunch without the high calories.

• Eat without the guilt. Give yourself permission to eat one or two of your favorites. Balance out your plate with realistic portions and concentrate on socializing, not the food.

What Are Phytochemicals?

Phytochemicals are chemicals found in plants. They don't usually have nutritional value, but they do contain protective, disease-preventing compounds. Scientists have identified more than 900 phytochemicals already, and more are discovered each day. There are more than 100 different phytochemicals in just one serving of vegetables!

The National Cancer Institute has been working with scientists on discovering more phytochemicals and why they're good for us. These chemicals are vital for the health of the plants and now, thanks to this research, we're finding that they can help protect humans against certain diseases. In fact, phytochemicals are helpful in the prevention and treatment of at least four of the leading causes of death in the United States-cancer, diabetes, cardiovascular disease and hypertension. They are also involved in many processes including ones that help prevent cell damage, keep cancer cells from spreading and those that decrease cholesterol levels.

As you can tell, phytochemicals are healthy for us and they're found in healthy foods.

Raspberries Possible Cancer Inhibitor

COLUMBUS, Ohio - Raspberries, which contains compounds that may prevent, stop or reverse the development of certain cancers, has produced such promising results in studies of lab rats that one Ohio State University researcher intends to begin human clinical trials upon approved funding.

Gary Stoner, head of the Laboratory of Cancer Chemoprevention and Etiology at OSU's James Cancer Hospital and Solove Research Institute, found that by feeding cancer-induced rats 5-10 percent of freeze-dried raspberries in their diet over a 36-week study reduced the development of tumors in the colon by 50 percent and reduced esophageal cancer by nearly 70 percent.

"The results provide the basis to consider using berries as an inhibitor of these cancers in humans," said Stoner.

The findings are the latest in a series of studies in recent years that consistently point to fruits such as strawberries, cranberries, blackberries, blueberries and varieties of raspberries as being inhibitors of colon and esophageal cancer in animals.

Stoner hopes that the human trials will produce the same results. "We are taking a food-based approach to cancer prevention," said Stoner. "If the berries provide protection in animals, then ultimately they would provide protection in humans."

If the human trials are approved, the research will focus on two conditions: Barrett's Esophagus, a disorder in which the lining of the esophagus goes through cellular changes caused by acid reflux, and Familial Adenomateous Polyposis (FAP), a rare genetic disease that can lead to colon cancer.

Stoner said that there is an increasing number of Americans who have Barrett's Esophagus and at least 10 percent of those with Barrett's develop a type of cancer called esophageal adenocarcinoma.

"The rate of increase in the development of the disease exceeds that of any other cancer at the moment," said Stoner, adding that the survival rate is very poor. "The survival rate is about 3 percent."

QUESTION — A reader requested an old recipe for clear bean soup made with fresh pork.

ANSWER — Durwood Tuttle, Knoxville, makes sweet pickles in a crock that he stores in a cellar. A gray fuzzy mold formed all over the crock. He washed the crock thoroughly with bleach water but it doesn't keep the mold from forming again. Any help would be appreciated. This is too late for the pickling season, but according to a Heintz pickling guide, slippery pickles are the result of a too weak vinegar solution, insufficient heat to destroy the microorganisms. Do not start counting the processing time until water returns to boil. Write for instructions and recipes to H.J. Heinz Co., P.O. Box 57, Pittsburgh, PA 15230-0057.

ANSWER — Lucy Howe requested a recipe for old-fashioned scrapple. Thanks to Rosemary Mattiuz, Kersey, for sending a recipe that her family has been using since 1959. They think it's the best ever tasted. Although it has the same name as the one printed in last week's issue, the ingredients are different.

Philadelphia Scrapple

2 pounds lean bony pork
2 quarts water
1 tablespoon salt
Pepper to taste
½ teaspoon sage or poultry seasoning
⅛ teaspoon mace
1 cup cornmeal
½ cup buckwheat flour

Put meat in kettle; add 1½ quarts water, salt, and pepper; simmer until meat is very tender. Skim fat from top, strain off broth and set aside.

Remove meat from bones and chop fine (do not grind). Pour broth into saucepan; add meat, sage, and mace, and bring to boil.

Combine cornmeal and buckwheat flour; slowly stir 2 cups cold water into mixture. Add a little at a time to meat, keeping simmering continuously. Stir until mixture reaches the consistency of soft mush. Lower heat so scrapple will not scorch, stirring occasionally until thick.

Pour into two 9x5x3-inch pans, rinsed with cold water. Chill.

To cook, turn scrapple out of pan and cut into ½- to 1¼-inch slices. Lay them so slices do not touch, in cold, heavy skillet. You may want to use a little oil in the pan. Set over moderate heat; let brown slowly and thoroughly on one side; repeat on the other side. It may take about 30 minutes to brown scrapple properly. Makes 8-14 servings.

Buckwheat flour is the secret for the fine flavor - plus the slow browning.

For extra flavor, add two slices pork liver, chopped, with pork.

Double Chocolate Hazelnut Biscotti

¾ cup hazelnuts, chopped
1¾ cups all-purpose flour
¾ cup mini semi-sweet chocolate chips
½ cup unsweetened Dutch-process cocoa powder
1 tablespoon instant expresso or coffee powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
2 egg whites
1 tablespoon vanilla extract

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Place hazelnuts on a baking sheet and bake until lightly brown, about 8 minutes. Cool. Line two large baking sheets with foil and spray the foil with nonstick cooking spray. Adjust the oven racks to divide the oven into thirds.

In a food processor, combine 2 tablespoons hazelnuts, flour, 2 tablespoons chocolate chips, baking soda, and salt. Process until nuts are finely ground. Transfer dry ingredients to a large bowl.

In the same food processor, combine sugar, eggs, egg whites, and vanilla until slightly thickened, about 2 minutes. Add to the dry ingredients.

Stir in remaining hazelnuts and chocolate chips.

Spoon ¼ of the batter (about ¾ cup) into a rope about 14-inches long and 1½-inches wide, on one side of the baking sheet. Repeat, with two ropes on each baking sheet. Bake, reversing sheets, once, until firm, about 15 minutes. Cool 10 minutes.

Reduce oven to 300 degrees.

Place logs on cutting board. With serrated knife, cut into ½-inch slices, about 80 biscotti. Place the slices upright on baking sheets, one-inch apart. Bake until the cut sides feels dry to the touch, 20-25 minutes. Cool completely on wire rack. Store in an airtight container.

Food Poisoning Risks

When you look at the faces around your holiday table, think about this: Nearly one in five of the people you see could face special risks from food poisoning.

Who? A lot of people are especially vulnerable to food poisoning. Most of them don't know it. People over 65, pregnant women, infants and people with chronic illnesses all stand a greater change of getting sick from food poisoning and suffering complications.

But here's the most important part. You can cut those risks, protecting yourself and your family. Most foodborne illness can be prevented by safe food handling.

One of the riskiest thing people do is something they've seen done for decades — leave the cooked turkey out all day. It's on the counter, it's on the table. People pick at it after dinner, and there it sits for hours.

Unfortunately, while it's sitting there, bacteria are multiplying, doubling every 20 minutes in the right conditions.

If just one bacterial cell got on the meat after you pulled it out of the oven at 1 o'clock by 8 that evening you could have over two million.

So here's the food safety rule: Two hours after you pull the cooked bird out of the oven, it should be back in the refrigerator. To speed cooling and limit bacterial growth, cut the meat from the bone, remove the stuffing, and store both in small, shallow containers.

For as long as we've been having holidays, we've had ways to save time with the fixings. Sometimes these old time-savers end up costing us more than time.

All night cooking is the leading example. Some people say, "Mom's turkey used to cook all night. We'd wake up in the morning to the smell of roasting turkey."

Overnight cooking is popular when people are having a lot of guests. A big turkey takes a long time to cook. Rather than get up at the crack of dawn, they cook the turkey all night at a low temperature. But it's not a safe practice.

Thorough cooking kills bacteria. But cooking at low temperatures — less than 325 degrees Fahrenheit (F) — has the opposite effect. The warmth of low heat actually helps bacterial grow.

Alternatives to overnight cooking include roasting two smaller turkeys or using a cooking bag or covered roasting pan to speed cooking.

Many consumers get confused about cooking bags. They remember their mother using brown grocery bags. The truth is they're not safe for cooking, and toxins from the glue in the seams could make you very sick.

For safe holiday foods, follow these tips:

- Thawing a frozen turkey. Don't thaw on the kitchen counter. Thaw in the refrigerator or microwave.
- Leftovers. To speed cooling, debone the turkey and refrigerate it in small, shallow containers.
- Cooking. Don't cook turkeys overnight at low temperatures. Cook at 325 degrees Fahrenheit.
- Desserts. Cook custards to 160 degrees Fahrenheit and refrigerate pies made with eggs.
- Eggnog. Don't use a raw egg recipe. Use commercially prepared, pasteurized eggnog or make your own with a cooked custard base.

Cranberries Not A Typical Garden Crop

What can you tell me about cranberries? I don't know anyone who has ever grown them in their garden like raspberries or blueberries.

Although they are related to blueberries, you won't find many home gardeners growing cranberries — they require exacting conditions not typically found in your backyard. Cranberry production occurs primarily on natural bogs (marshes or wetlands with very wet, spongy, acidic soils of high organic matter) that have been modified substantially with ditches and dikes for water management, or on artificially created bogs that have flood control systems.

Highly susceptible to frost, the plants need the insulating effect of water to survive frosts in spring and fall. Cranberry growers often flood their beds to harvest the berries, which float for easy removal. In climates with harsh winters, the low, broadleaf evergreen vine is protected from heavy frost and winter winds by the water or even a layer of ice, both good insulators.

Because of the special growing conditions needed for cranberries — — acidic soil high in organic matter, few nutrients, cool summer temperatures and the potential for controlled flooding — they're grown in relatively few places around the nation: mostly in Wisconsin, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Oregon and Washington, but also in Rhode Island, Connecticut, Michigan, Minnesota and Long Island, NY.

Not surprisingly, a good portion of the nation's annual cranberry consumption — about 20 percent — takes place during the week of Thanksgiving.

Cranberries are tart and are usually heavily sweetened. A cup of cranberry juice cocktail contains 90 milligrams of vitamin C, just what adults need each day. However, a half-cup of cranberry sauce has significantly less vitamin C — only about 3 milligrams. The huge difference is due to the concentration of cranberries: It takes about 4,400 cranberries, or 10 pounds, to make 1 gallon of cranberry juice. Cranberries also contain antioxidants that might help prevent cancer or heart disease.

An October 1998 study published in the New England Journal of Medicine finally gave some credence to the folk remedy of drinking cranberry juice to reduce the risk of urinary tract infections. It appears that tannins in cranberry extracts inhibit the binding of E. coli to cells on the lining of the urinary tract. That allows the bacteria to be flushed from the body. Blueberries also have those tannins.

Oyster Stew At Grandma's House On Christmas Day

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

Going to Grandma's house on Christmas Day evening was lots of fun when I was growing up. Grandma was happy to keep a tradition of making oyster stew and inviting aunts, uncles, and cousins for a meal.

As soon as the relatives came inside from the cold, Grandma heaped their coats, scarves, and mittens on the bed downstairs where she and Grandpa slept.

For supper Grandma also fixed lettuce salad with homemade dressing and put out fancy dishes filled with cookies, potato candy, hardtack, peanut brittle, and pumpkin pie.

Potato candy is a really good treat. To make it, just squash a medium potato that has been boiled tender and peeled, or put a spoonful of leftover mashed potatoes in a medium bowl. Add a little vanilla for flavor. You may need a whole bag of confectioners' sugar. Mix it in by small amounts. Eventually, it gets thick enough to flatten with a rolling pin on a flat surface, like pie dough. Spread yummy peanut butter over it. Roll up like a jelly roll, slice thin, store in a candy tin with waxed paper or refrigerate and eat.

Back to Grandma's celebration. The table was not big enough for everybody to sit at together, so some relatives sat on the stairway built on the dining room side of the living room wall.

The steps was a great place, high enough to watch the grownups below. The grownups talked and told fun stories to each other while the kids listened.

Grandma served the stew plain to anybody who didn't like the grayish, funny-looking oysters floating in the bowl with round oyster crackers.

The men would laugh and tease and say: "Oh, just swallow it whole," when a big spoonful of oyster went into their mouth along with the creamy liquid on the soup spoon.

There were lots and lots of dirty dishes to wash at the big white kitchen sink but kids didn't have to help. Grandma's daughters cleaned up for Grandma.

After supper the cousins went outside to frolic in the snow. There were more kids than sleds to go around. So they doubled up to slide down the long hill on a road near the big farmhouse.

First, the biggest and oldest kid laid down on the sled in order to steer it. Next, a smaller person laid on top of him and held on for dear life. They spread their legs wide so a third person could leap on after shoving them off with all his might. There was barely room for his knees.

Usually, when the sled picked up speed it was easy to lose your balance and topple off while it shot on down the road. Everyone shouted and laughed and got up with snow packed in their boots around their socks.

When their parents made them come in again the children looked like snowmen. Icy crystals stuck fast to their coats, caps, hair, and eyebrows. Cheeks were rosy and chapped and noses were runny.

There was a spiky thorn bush Grandma stored year after year and brought out at Christmas for a colorful gum drop tree decoration.

The other thing about Grandma, she saved every piece of gift wrapping paper, string, and bows. There was a time, earlier, when people had very little money to spend. Like many others, they just used things again and again.

Today, after the neat presents are unwrapped, the oyster stew, candy, and pie are eaten, the best thing about Christmas is still the families that get together.

Grandma and Grandpa put a lot of love into Christmas because they always remembered that Baby Jesus was born in a very poor stable in Bethlehem. Grandma and Grandpa believed the three rich kings that brought expensive gifts to the Christ Child were a good example to do the same for others.

Wow!

Boy oh boy oh boy!

Merry Christmas!

Can water make me sick?
Water itself won't make you sick—it's what is in the water that you need to worry about!
It's very important that the water we drink be clean and safe. If it's dirty or contaminated, we could get awful-sounding diseases like typhoid, dysentery or hepatitis.
Many people who live outside of a town or city get their water from a well or spring. Older wells may have more bacteria—because of the way they were built. The groundwater itself may not be dirty, but an older well or spring could be acting like a funnel and things like chemicals or other impurities could seep in and contaminate the water.
Those of us who live in town may get water from one main water supply. Lucky for us, the waterworks people test the water on a regular basis. They make sure it's free from harmful bacteria that could come from human or animal waste, garbage or chemicals. If they find that the water supply is dirty and unsafe, they find ways to clean it. Boiling water is one way to kill harmful bacteria. When contamination occurs, the health department may require everyone to boil water before using it. Boiling the contaminated water for one minute kills disease-causing organisms.
Find out where your water comes from!
Scientifically yours, inherit many of the pieces and refurnish the home to much of its original state. These furnishings include such items as 1830's walnut wardrobes, marbleized wooded furniture, bustle chairs, and daybeds.

In 1983, Hilda and other volunteers compiled an inventory of every historical building in the Oley Valley.

"It was a great accomplishment," Hilda said with obvious pride. She has a large notebook filled with handwritten records, which will be passed on to the historical society.

"Every place is special," Hilda said of historical landmarks. She said the project began in 1980 when local residents were concerned by a stream going dry which threatened traditional land use patterns. The Oley Valley Heritage Association was formed to study and preserve the heritage of the historical region.

Lenni Lenape Native Americans inhabited the area before the 1700s. Settlers of German, French, Swiss, English, and Swedish heritage brought agricultural and architectural traditions to the are. Mostly stone cabins, springhouses, and outbuildings were erected. From 1740-1780, second generation farmers built steep-roofed houses and barns with arched openings, and Germanic style buildings with medieval overtones. From 1780-1820, prosperous farmers and ironmasters built elaborate Georgian manor houses as water-powered mills, forges, and furnaces flourished. The Fisher homestead and 10 other mansions have been registered as being built in the Oley Valley during this time.

Bushels of shellbark nuts and of pecans gathered from a century's old pecan tree line the farmhouse's side porch. Hilda continues to make family favorites passed down through the generations such as sour string beans made with dried string beans.

The couple is active at the Salem United Church of Christ and with the Oley Fair.

One of the things they do together is mow the lawn.

"She has the easy job," Frank jokes about a heart problem that has slowed him down a bit. "She mows with the push lawnmower and I use the riding one."

When she received the Ag Woman of the Year Award, Hilda was lauded for exemplifying generosity of spirit, continual willingness to help advance agriculture in every day life, and to get the job done.

"If you practice Christian principles, with the help of God, you will accomplish things," Hilda said. "We never lived on Easy Street but we lived on Happy Street."

The Fishers have an abundance of stories about the rooms, furnishings, and family history associated with the home.

Deck Your Doors With Greenery

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — In preparation for the Christmas season, people throughout the states are decorating their homes with greenery.

Many people question where this custom began.

Dieter Wolter told participants during the Berks County holiday program, "The ancients believed greens had special powers since they remained green throughout the winter. Decorating with evergreens began as a symbol representing Christ's life everlasting."

Wolter said of holiday decorations, "Laden with traditions and customs, immigrants came to America on the boat. Since then, many of these traditions and customs have spread with each generation going a little more nuts and overdoing it."

He isn't complaining. Wolter, who operates Temple Greenhouse, makes a living arranging greenery and and flowers for clients.

Recently, Wolter and his sister, Sheila, revealed tricks of the floral trade when making wreaths, swags, and garlands.

"Don't pick evergreens until after the first heavy frost. Then all the brown things have fallen off," Wolter said. He prefers shipping in varieties of Noble fir and Norway pines, which hold up better than local evergreens.

When creating swags, wreaths, and garlands, Wolter suggests creating a three dimensional-look by layering different sizes of greens together before attaching with number 22 wire. Chenille stems work well for attaching bows and for hanging.

One of the things that has changed in recent years, is that Christmas decorating is no longer limited to the colors of green and red.

"All different colors are used in order to make the decorations fit with the style and colors of the rooms," Wolter said.

Put larger greens toward the outer edges of a wreath and smaller ones toward the center. Remember that a variety of greens cut in different lengths give a fuller three-dimensional look. Seeded eucalyptus, boxwood, juniper, and pinecones complement the greens, but "too much is too much," said Wolter who believes "brevity" is often more appealing.

Swags and garlands appear three-dimensional when greens of different sizes are layered, according to Dieter Wolter.

"Just plunk a doll in a wreath," he said of the ease of which one can make a stunning statement.

Wolter showed several ways in which to customize arrangements to fit the personality of the owner. One of the most outlandish was a wreath stuck with bullet shells, bow and arrows.

Williamsburg-style arrangements that use natural materials are popular, but Wolter warned that placing oranges and apples next to holly will cause all the holly leaves to drop off within a few days.

He created a wreaths with meaningful symbolism. He said that fruit branches symbolize the hope of the world. Pinecones represent the seed of faith sown by Christ. Grapes reflect the joy in the miracle brought into the world by Christ. The dove represents Christ's peace.

Regardless of what designs are used, Wolter said it is important to protect doors and woodwork surfaces from sap by covering the back of stems with ribbon.

While people rush to put up holiday decorations, Wolter reminds them, "May the light, joy, hope, and peace of Christmas always be yours."

Sheila Wolters shows off a wreath reflecting Christmas symbolism: fruit branches symbolize the hope of the world, pinecones represent the seed of faith sown by Christ, grapes reflect the joy in the miracle brought into the world by Christ, and the dove represents Christ's peace.

At left, on the first day of hunting season, Garrison bagged this deer in Tioga County. The six-wheel all-terrain vehicle enables Garrison to safely maneuver over rugged mountainsides.

Spina Bifida Doesn't Stop Garrison From Shooting Buck, Playing Basketball, Weight Lifting, More

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Sixteen-year-old Garrison Whitmyer joined thousands of hunters in search of an elusive buck during deer season.

On the first day of hunting season, Garrison took one shot and landed a three-point deer.

While hunters each have their own story to tell, Garrison's is most amazing, because he was born with a handicap — spina bifida. The birth defect results in a split spine and paralysis and confines him to a wheelchair.

Because his dad Gary is an avid hunter, it is understandable that Garrison yearned to share the excitement of a big hunt. Through research and planning, the family discovered that a six-wheel all-terrain vehicle with hand controls was the solution to scale rocky cliffs and rugged mountainsides. These vehicles are allowed on hunting grounds only with special permits given to the handicapped.

Garrison drove the vehicle outfitted with a special gun rack for his 300 Savage. He drove to a 20-foot tree stand erected on a relative's property in Tioga County. With sheer arm strength and some assistance from his dad, Garrison was able to heave himself into the tree stand.

"We call it the 'condo,'" Garrison said of the tree stand, which has four walls, a roof, and even some furniture. Although the family had been going to the condo for years, the first day of hunting season was the final day the condo could be used for hunting because the land has been sold.

At 9:30 a.m., the four guys huddled in the condo saw deer running beneath them. Because the deer were running, it was difficult to determine if any were buck.

A whistle caused the deer to halt and sniff out the danger.

The three-second pause was all that was needed for Garrison to get a clear view of the buck and aim.

Garrison said, "After I shot it, I saw it run about 50 yards, but I couldn't tell if I had hit it."

The hunters waited in the tree stand about 20 minutes before searching for a blood trail.

Gary discovered the fallen buck, but it was Garrison who hauled it back to camp on his six-wheeler.

Neither his dad nor the other relatives who were hunting with them saw any other deer that day, making Garrison's trophy even more memorable.

Garrison and his dad butchered the deer themselves, making mostly steaks, roasts, and burger.

While his hunting excursion is unusual considering his handicap, Garrison has long been known for breaking medical limitations despite some major setbacks.

When he was first born, doctors told his parents that spina bifida was often associated with mental limitations. The possibility seemed even more probable when the operation the doctors performed when Garrison was only seven days old caused pressure to built up in his brain and resulted in hydrocephalus. Garrison still has a shunt in his brain to drain the fluid, but from the start, Garrison showed mental alertness and accomplished verbal and tactile skills above his age level.

Doctors had said that he would never walk because he was born without hip sockets and with club feet. But to their amazement, when fitted with leg braces, he is able to walk short distances with crutches.

He has had more than 15 surgeries to correct his feet and replace the brain shunt.

In 1990 Garrison was named the Lancaster County Easter Seals ambassador. His determination and achievements have been an encouragement to many.

He excels in swimming and even plays on a wheelchair basketball team. Garrison said members of the team, called the Chariot Express, range in ages from 15-40 years. They travel over the Northeast playing other wheelchair teams. More members are needed for the team. For more details about wheelchair basketball, call (717) 270-5696.

While his hunting excursion is unusual considering his handicap, Garrsion has long been known for breaking medical limitations despite some major setbacks.

A sophomore at Elizabethtown High School, Garrison's favorite activity is weight lifting. Last year, he received the school award for outstanding accomplishment in bench pressing. His goal is to break the school record in bench press before he graduates. The school record is 170 pounds and Garrison presses 150.

During the summer months, Garrison works in merchandise sales for Hershey Park. He banks his earnings consistently to save for a car. Although he wants to drive, it costs thousands of dollars for the required evaluation and six hours of training.

Garrison's braces extend from his toes to his armpits, which puts him at risk for skin adhesions.

When asked about his career dreams, Garrison jokingly replies that he wants to go into law enforcement so he can give tickets to the many people who abuse handicapped parking spaces. While many strides have been made to make areas handicapped accessible, Garrison said, that most people don't realize that many places are still off-limits to people like him.

While public places are required to have bathrooms for the handicapped, often the doorways are too narrow for a wheelchair to pass through, which in effect renders the bathroom useless but in compliance with the law.

Garrison enjoys computers and music. He plays guitar, electric guitar, piano, and keyboard, and sings a bit. He also wrote a song, which is sung at his church where he is active in the youth group.

The Whitmoyers live within a quarter of mile of state game lands and are pleased that some sections are handicapped accessible. Garrison had a special permit to use a crossbow during archery season.

The family says they have a small zoo on their 15-acre property, which includes 6-20 mini-lop rabbits, Zebra finches, pygmy goats, fish, African frogs, a hamster, an Australian herding dog, and 35 Aracanna chickens, a Mexican breed that lays different colored eggs, from mint to olive green. Eggs from the free-range hens are sold to a local natural food cooperative.

Garrison charts rabbit prices weekly to help his mom determine the best time to market them.

Garrison's siblings include Gabrielle, 12; Gavin, 10; Regina, 6; and Gideon, 5.

Garrison with his mom Rita and siblings Gabrielle, 12; Gavin, 10; Regina, 6; and Gideon, 5.

Popping wheelies gives Regina and Gideon a thrill.

Garrison uses a crossbow for hunting on the family acreage and on state gamelands within a quarter of a mile of the Whitmyer's.

'Ahh, The Power Of Cheese' TV Advertising Expanded For Holidays

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — To boost holiday cheese sales, the dairy farmer-funded and -directed American Dairy Association and Dairy Council Mid East, on behalf of the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program, stepped up its cheese TV advertising efforts in November and December.

Consumers can see "Ahh, the Power of Cheese™" TV commercials more often as a result of the expanded cheese media plan and thus, are reminded more frequently about the satisfaction and pleasure of eating cheese.

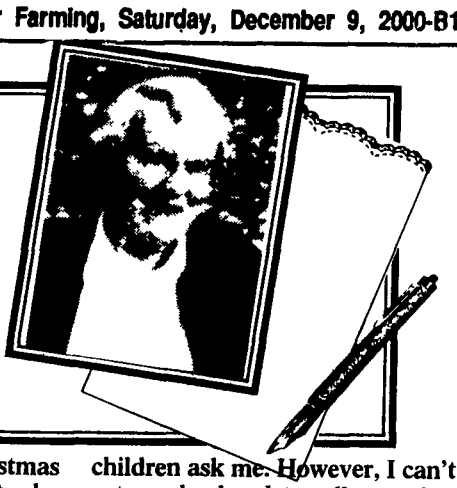
Specifically, the "Santa" commercial will have increased airtime in 14 markets in Ohio, West Virginia, and western Pennsylvania. "Santa" humorously shows one family getting hefty rewards — including a new sports car, a pony, and other elaborate gifts after leaving Santa a cheese snack. It's obvious that cheese has the power to affect people deeply — even Santa Claus.

Aimed at cheese lovers, the "Ahh, the Power of Cheese™" advertising campaign accurately reflects how cheese lovers, who represent 73 percent of the population, believe. Research indicates that cheese lovers are likely to think there is "something wrong" with somebody who does not like cheese because cheese is one of the world's most popular foods. With so many varieties and flavors, there is bound to be a type of cheese that appeals to most everyone, so a cheese lover is almost "suspicious" of anyone who does not like cheese.

Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser



Time to prepare for Christmas and I feel as though I've just celebrated Thanksgiving. But, the calendar says it is time to prepare Christmas cards. As I usually put a note in my 100 some cards, it does take a while to get them ready. they will need a whole roll of stamps. We must remember how nice it is to hear from relatives and friends who live far away when we get their cards.

A constant reminder that Christmas is coming is the fact that there are a number of brightly wrapped gifts sitting on our dining room table. Our daughter from Indiana was here and left them so that she would not need to mail them later.

This year I made a list of things that I need in case my children ask me. However, I can't get my husband to tell me what he wants. Maybe he has everything that he wants.

Finally, we are getting some room in our freezers as we slowly eat the vegetables and fruit that I froze this summer. That space will soon be occupied by boxes of cookies. I start a few weeks before the holiday and freeze a wide variety of cookies as I'll need them to pack boxes for our neighbors.

While my husband was away deer hunting in Tioga County, I decided to recover the arms of an upholstered chair. I am no seamstress and so it took me hours compared to someone who knew how to do the job. But the arms are protected and that is what matters.

Over the holiday we got to see almost a dozen of our grandchildren. The two oldest are in college and the youngest one was two months old. It is a memory full of many hugs and kisses.

Great Gift!

NOW UPDATED WITH ROADS!

Stream Maps of Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey Maryland/Delaware

Why every fisherman needs these maps

It is estimated that 10% of all the fishermen catch 90% of the fish. Regardless of which group you fall into... there's a sure way to up your odds... simply try new fishing waters. Fish where few fishermen ever fish.

Professor Higbee's Stream Maps are the first and only highly detailed maps of their kind... showing virtually all of the streams, rivers and lakes in each state.

Professor Higbee's® STREAMS

The STREAM MAP OF PENNSYLVANIA was completed in 1965 after a thirty-year effort by Howard Higbee, a former Penn State Professor.

The map is also known as the LOST STREAM MAP to some anglers.

Professor Higbee succeeded in creating a map of the highest detail possible...a map that shows every stream and lake. He painstakingly plotted by hand, the location of 45,000 miles of streams onto a 3 x 5 foot map.

The map sold extremely well -- until it was lost several years later. Incredibly, the printer entrusted with the original drawing and printing plates declared bankruptcy, then carelessly hauled Higbee's 30 years of work to a landfill.

The few remaining dog-eared copies became a prized fisherman's possession. Professor Higbee was offered $400 for one of his last maps. And state agencies were forced to keep their copies under lock and key.

Experts told Professor Higbee that reprints were impossible, because the maps were printed in non-photographic blue.

Then, in 1991, at the age of 91, Howard Higbee's dream came true. Computers made it possible to reprint the map. Holding an updated map, Howard said, "I never thought I'd live to see this day."

He had on a hood and a collar of red
When the streams of rain pour out of the sky
And the sparklers of lightning go flashing by
And the big, big wheels of thunder roll He can snuggle back in the telephone pole.

Read Supplement Claims Carefully

Do herbal supplements have to be proven effective before they're sold?

Not really. Any dietary supplement can be marketed unless the Food and Drug Administration can prove that it's harmful. Whether a product is effective or not isn't examined.

That wasn't always the case, though. In the early 1900s, all sorts of outlandish claims regarding supplements, extracts and tonics led the federal government to tighten restrictions. By the early 1960s, all substances marketed as drugs had to be proven safe and effective in the classic randomized, double-blind, placebo-controlled clinical trial — the most rigorous test available. Few herbal remedies could meet these standards.

However, 1994's Dietary Supplement Health and Education Act changed things drastically. After Congress passed it, dietary supplements could start making "structure and function" claims without prior FDA review as long as they had substantiation of the claim in their company files. Those are claims that indicate the products affect the structure or function of the body. They're not the same as claims that a product can prevent or treat a disease. Companies that want to make medical claims about their dietary supplements have to meet a much higher standard, and only a few have been approved since 1994.

Unfortunately, many people have trouble differentiating between 'structure and function" claims and medical claims. For example, a structure and function claim can say "helps maintain a healthy circulatory system" but it can't say "helps prevent heart disease." Still, many people will think those two claims say pretty much the same thing.

Furthermore, no U.S. agency has the authority to check the quality of dietary supplements. Consumers must trust that the potency and amount of active ingredient listed on a label is actually what's in the product. Some private organizations, such as Consumer Reports and the Los Angeles Times, have conducted random tests on dietary supplements and found some products severely lacking in active ingredient, compared to what was listed on the label.

Consumers with access to the Internet can find evaluations of many supplements at http://consumerlab.com/, a site run by ConsumerLab.com, a White Plains, N.Y., company that conducts independent tests to evaluate such products. Unfortunately, nutritionists say that "buyer beware" is the best guidance for anyone purchasing dietary supplements.

Lancaster Society 18

During the November meeting, members of Lancaster Farm Women Society 18 heard new facts and refreshed their memories about the events in the life of evangelist Dr. Billy Graham.

The meeting opened with refreshments served in the lovely home of president Ruth Landis, Lancaster. Roll call was answered by members stating the number of telephones in their home. Guest speakers were Carl Bernhardt and his wife. Bernhardt told how Graham's life was shaped, from his early years, attendance at the Bible Institute of Florida, meeting his wife-to-be, Ruth Bell, close friendships with several Presidents. Graham's world-wide ministry is funded by individual gifts, not by large corporations in order to prevent obligations. Also explained was how the life of Graham's son Franklin and his spiritual transformation.

The business meeting included early plans for the January Farm Show and simple plans for a Christmas gift exchange. Friendships of this group gives sharing times of illness and of joy and laughter.

The meeting was dismissed by singing the theme song, "Brighten The Corner."

Lancaster Society 14

Members of Lancaster Farm Women Society 14 have been enjoying many interesting activities. Entertaining Sister Society 20 from the Kirkwood area at the Farm and Home Center was made special by the Mueller Twins presentation "God's Hidden Treasures."

Hostesses who greeted guests, prepared lovely tables and arranged the 'carry-in' dishes for the serving line, were Helen Hershey, Ellen Newswanger, Polly Stoltzfus, and Jean Groff.

Food and fellowship spotlight the annual picnic held at Tinney Pavilion of Strasburg. Guest speaker, Dr. Albert Price, emphasized the importance of farm safety. Rhoda Landis, Viola Hostetter, Eileen McComas, and Jean F. Groff were responsible for hosting the evening.

The benefit auction at the home of Gladys Esbenshade was again fun and successful. Delicious refreshments were served by Clara Rohrer and Helen Herr.

On Oct. 4, a number of ladies took time to reach out to others when they went to Conestoga View to play bingo with the residents there.

The countywide convention of Farm Women Society was held at the Farm and Home Center on Nov. 4. Two wives of Washington Congressmen. Janet Hall and Carolyn Wolf, were introduced by former Senate Chaplain C.P. Wright's wife. These ladies, one republican and one democrat, are dear friends, proving that political barrier's can be crossed. The common bond is that they both honor God and enjoy the freedom to speak of their relationship and Christ.

Janet Leaman and Helen Hershey hosted Farm Women 14's Nov. 8 meeting at the Ambassadors For Christ facility. The ministry of AFC is to Chinese people living in America. For roll call, members had opportunity to tell about an Asian friend.

A tour within the building took members to see an exact replica of the "Dark Chamber" where Chritianna Tsi spent many years. Many large bags of non-perishable food was brought to this meeting which will be given to Christ's Home, Paradise.

As members hearts are turned to the joys of Christmas, they are anticipating a special evening of 'feasting' at the home of Jonathan and Katie Stoltzfus.

It is the policy of Ritchie Bros. Auctioneers to sell each and every item in its auction sales without minimum, reserves, or limits. Every item is sold to the highest bidder regardless of bid price. The owner and any agent of the owner (specifically including in this particular sale any member of the Hahn family) are contractually prohibited from bidding on their own equipment.

We strictly enforce this policy worldwide and have done so for over 35 years. Anyone knowing of any owner bidding on his own equipment should advise us at once.

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

MCVEYTOWN (Mifflin Co.) — One of Dr. Darwin G. Braund's favorite thank-you notes came from a school-age child who toured the Pasto Agricultural Museum near the Rock Springs Agricultural Research Center in Centre County, a museum filled with farm and home items powered solely by human or animal muscle strength. The note thanked Dr. Braund for showing them the Nordic Track for horses.

Dr. Braund serves as curator of the museum that's open during Ag Progress Days and for tours by appointment. The museum houses more than 700 rare and unusual items. The oldest item at the museum is a 6,000-year-old Mesopotamian clay scythe donated by a Penn State professor of anthropology.

Museum visitors can turn cranks, move levers, and spin wheels on butter churns, corn shellers, corn grinders, cake makers, wagon jacks, fannng mills, cream separators, and grass seeders. None of the items used electric or engine power.

Dr. Darwin G. Braund of the Pasto Agricultural Museum near Rock Springs, Centre County, talks about farm and household implements used before the advent of electricity or engines.

Recently, Dr. Braund has been taking some of these interesting artifacts "on the road" when serving as featured speaker at banquets. He presented his program at the Mifflin County Farm City banquet the middle of November.

"Who knows what this is?" Dr. Braund asked, reaching for a long-handled device.

"No, not a popcorn popper. It's a bed warmer. You filled it with hot coals and slid it around between the sheets before climbing in."

Dr. Braund showed the audience what he calls the first computer — a counter for bushels of "whatever." The wooden block with a dial was designed to hang on the side of a threshing machine. He then lifted up a grain scythe that he determined is a left-handed one by the way the edge is beveled.

Working in the home before electricity or engines meant scrubbing clothes on washboards and ironing clothes with irons heated on coals. Later, a cast iron model was built to store hot coals within.

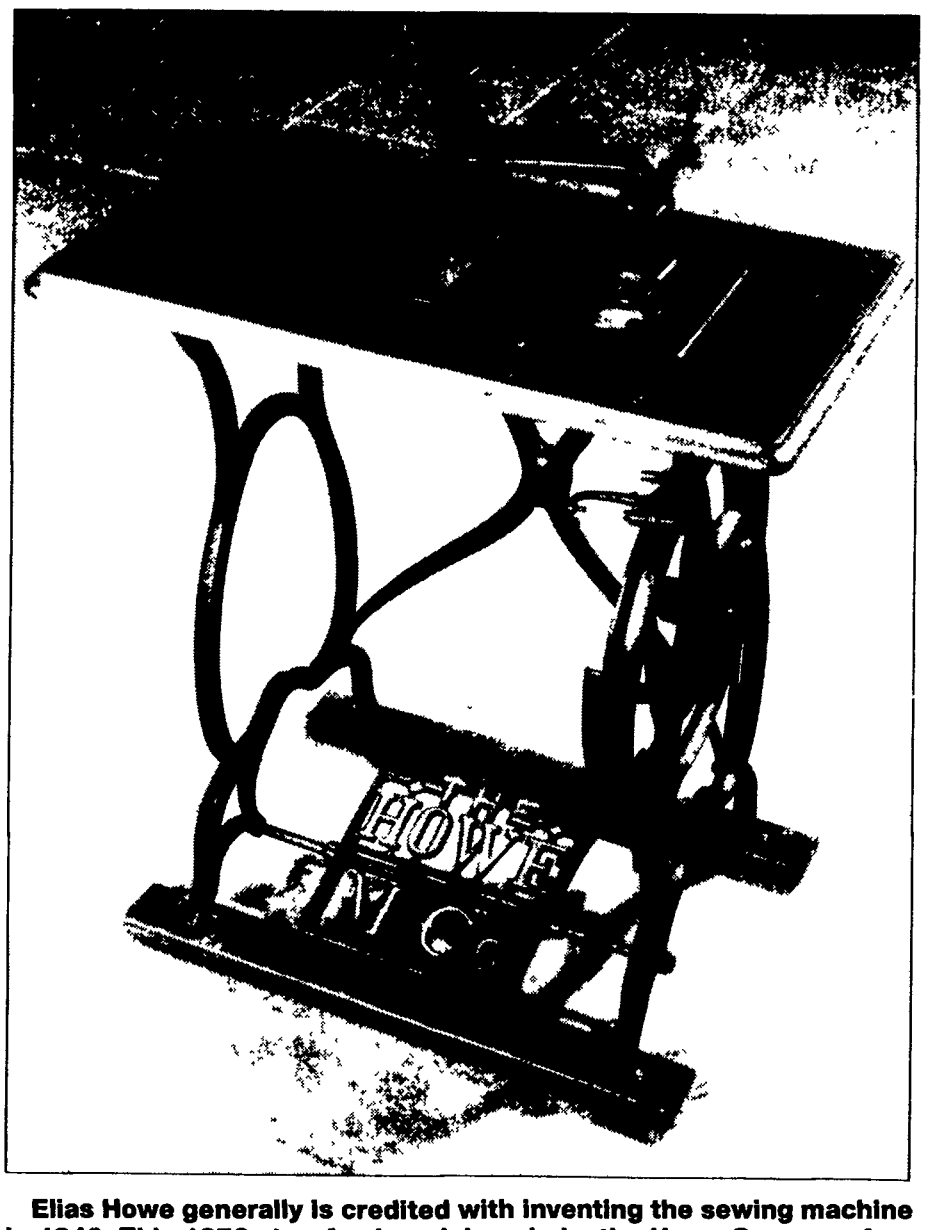
"Did you know Pennsylvania is the number one state for butter prints and molds?" Dr. Braund asked.

Butter branding represents the beginning of branded products. Farmers would make their butter, identify it with a brand (their initials or special designs or prints in the butter), and then sell it at a store. The customer would know which butter he or she wanted to buy by the brand.

Butter molds are found in 1- and 2-pound sizes. Dr. Braund showed the audience a rare glass butter mold with a cow imprint.

Ice cream was appreciated as much in the mid-1800s as it is today. Dr. Braund showed an 1880 Victorian ice cream scoop in which the top turned to scrape the ice cream onto the plate. His #6 ice cream dipper with scraper means that six of these scoops equal one quart. The tiny #100 scoop was reserved for free samples. Dr. Braund held up an oblong ice cream gadget used to shape the ice cream for in ice cream sandwiches. To prevent wasting any ice cream, the ice cream scoop is curved to fit the side of the ice cream container.

These cans have traveled far, by steam train. They were used to ship milk and cream from the Stouff farm near Downingtown to Philadelphia in the 1880's and 1890's. Both cans have a brass plate showing the farmer" name, and the smaller cream can also has PRR on it for the Pennsylvania railroad. The large can was reinforced by four, three-inch steel straps, but even so, it shows evidence of considerable "banging around" on its back and forth journeys. It has even been soldered once. -Pasto Agricultural Museum, Penn State University.



Elias Howe generally is credited with inventing the sewing machine in 1846. This 1872 step-feed model made by the Howe Company features a brass medallion showing the bust of the inventor. Ladies, start your sewing machines. -Pasto Agricultural Museum, Penn State University.

Many Techniques Made Furniture Elegant

From the earliest days when furniture was first made to satisfy a variety of utilitarian needs, its makers added touches for beauty. The ancient civilizations used paint and gilt, even inlays of precious stones and carvings. The furniture of ancient Rome was made from exotic woods and often trimmed with bronze. Sometimes it was nielloed with gold or silver. It was usually the tables that were adorned with ivory, tortoiseshell and metals.

Oriental furniture was usually made of rosewood that was carved in various ways. Lacquer and polychrome paint were used to enrich Chinese furniture. The Japanese combined lacquer with mother-of-pearl inlays and often painted with gold or silver. Some of the most elegant furniture was made in India and the Islamic countries from the 14th century and later.

In Europe, by the 13th century, furniture as we know it, came into being. It was ornamented with heavy carved panels and Gothic motifs.

By the 16th century, Italy was making small "fancy" pieces. However, it was the armorers not the woodworkers who created them using inlays of marble and semi-precious stone.

It was in the late 17th century, however, that cabinet-making came into it's own in Italy in Baroque designs. The wealthy and royalty commissioned cabinet makers to create elaborate pieces. Veneering was used, often of ivory, silver and tortoiseshell.

During the same period, the Dutch or Low Country became expert at parquetry patterns and floral marquetry. A popular veneer was ebony.

In Spain and Portugal at that time craftsmen made "platersque" inlays that were delicate abstract geometric or flower-style geometric inlays. Decorative sprung-iron brackets trimmed table legs and aprons.

German furniture was enriched with intarsia work in varied color woods and often complex scenes. Another German speciality was pietre dure, using semi-precious stones.

The most elaborate techniques were used in France in the early 18th century. They included the use of engraved brass, tortoiseshell and ebony marquetry. Gilt bronze in many designs decorated every type of furniture. The furniture designed for royalty used such exotic veneers as mother-of-pearl combined with gilt and silvered bronze mounts. Veneering was at its finest with various woods. Imitation Wedgewood jasperware plaques were popular inlays.

In England in the 17th century, Japanese furniture and oyster pattern marquetry were the fashion. Floral marquetry was adapted from Holland. Elaborately carved decorations of solid mahogany were applied in the 18th century and various wood veneers were used. However, it is the Thomas Chippendale influence that is most closely associated with English furniture decoration of this period. His Chinese and Gothic influenced carving on the backs of chairs, other furniture and decorative accessories are most familiar.

Eighteenth century American furniture after the Revolution used patriotic motifs as wood inlays along with carved, full figures of eagles, swags, and others.

Clues: Some descriptions of decorative techniques are:

- Marquetry — a veneer of a complex, usually pictorial motif. Often using various woods.
- Parquetry — simple, geometric marquetry of one or several kinds of wood.
- Pietre Dure — decorative panels of semi-precious stones and marbles.
- Niello — a way of decorating metal with a black inlay by fusing an alloy of various metals into an engraved design.
- Oyster Shell Veneer — wooden veneer cut from small branches of trees like laburnum, so that each separate veneer resembles an oyster shell.

Collectors Wacky For Wicker

ANNE GILBERT
Antique Detective

Once upon a time, before interior decorators gussied up wicker, painted it white and moved it indoors, prices were low. In fact, they were sometimes non-existent, since garbage dumps and city alleys offered fine displays of wicker. Now, wicker of every vintage from circa 1850 to the circa 1927 Sears catalog, continues to be poplar and prices continue rising. Since the 1970s, there have been dealers who are wicker specialists.

While the gingerbready Victorian wicker pieces have always enjoyed a degree of popularity, this was not so with 1920s examples. These days anything wicker goes fast at shows and in shops.

The word "wicker" itself describes the qualities of the material. It derives from the Scandinavian "vika" meaning "to bend." It can also describe a variety of materials that bend that includes rattan, cane, reed, willow, Oriental sea grass and machine-twisted paper. This very characteristic has allowed wicker to be fashioned into many diverse items. Furniture is the most familiar. Examples have also been found of a wicker phonograph and a wicker grandfather clock. Doll buggies from the 1920s and baby carriages from the turn of the century always find buyers who use them to display dolls and plants. Recently, when a turn-of-the-century photograph's settee came to auctions at Skinner Gallery, it had an estimated value of $500-700.

Wicker always had a status image from the time it was first used in country houses of the wealthy. The fancy "posing chair" used by turn-of-the-century photographer had a single arm that allowed the subject to assume an elegant pose. It was a time when wicker fainting couches and daybeds were popular on front porches for the ultimate relaxation.

Learn to recognize the earliest wicker, made in the 1850s in America. And, know that reproductions of Victorian pieces have been around for two decades.

Wicker was popular in Europe and when it first appeared, the finish was either stained dark brown or coated with a natural varnish. The first pieces were simple in lines, but like the woods of the Victorian period, designs gradually became fanciful combinations of curlicues and small wood balls.

The most popular (and reproduced) rattan styles featuring heart designs were responded in Hong Kong in the 1950s and 60s. Sometimes, 19th century wicker has retained the original labels. Two of the best known makers were Topf of New York City and Wakefield Rattan Company of Boston and New York.

From 1900 through the 1920s wicker furniture, did a big mail-order catalog business. The bird cage and fernery that sold then for $13.95 would be considered a novelty today and priced for more than $400. Reed, wicker furniture came in sets that might include a settee and rocker. They were in a natural brown color. The emphasis was on comfort, since they had come indoors, and seats were padded and backs were partially upholstered.

Everything from smoking stands to swings found a ready market. The Larkin Company pictured plant baskets as well as a tea wagon in their catalog. Woven reed baby and doll carriages offered the sublime and the ridiculous. For instance, "Pullman Sleeper Coaches" came with upholstered interiors and parasols. A reclining "go-cart with parasol" recently sold at an estate sale for several hundred dollars.

In the 1920s, Heywood-Wakefield Company began making handcraft stick wicker furniture. It fit in perfectly with the new Art Deco designs.

Every year, about this time, I am faced with the unenviable task of compiling "THE LIST!" This is brought about by looking at inventory reports (as well as keeping our eyes open as we walk through our machinery lot each day) and realizing that some equipment has simply been here TOO LONG! "THE LIST" for YEAR 2000 contains NEW and USED items which we are DISCOUNTING BY AS MUCH AS 50% OFF of our actual cost on certain items. Stop in today and haul 'em away. Our loss is your gain! I'm not the most popular guy with my sales force, but they've had their chance, now this "LIST" has got to go!!

USDA Releases Grain Transportation Prospects

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The USDA recently reported its assessment of the current grain transportation situation in the U.S., as well as predictions for the next several months.

"We provide this information periodically as part of USDA's Long-Term Agricultural Transportation Strategy," said Michael V. Dunn, under secretary for marketing and regulatory programs. "It is intended to help railroads, producers, shippers, and receivers prepare for the changes that occur in agricultural transportation throughout the year."

Based on November 2000 forecasts, production of corn, sorghum, barley, oats, wheat, rye, and soybeans in 2000/2001 is expected to be 16 billion bushels, up 4 percent from 1999/2000. Grain and soybean stocks are forecast down 220 million bushels from last year, a total of 4,861 million bushels. This is the second largest grain and soybean stock level since 1993.

Although grain exporters have experienced higher ocean rate spreads in 2000, the ocean rate spreads between the Gulf and Pacific Northwest still favor shipments from the Gulf. The year 2000 started with higher oil prices, which increased the cost of all modes of transportation, including ocean vessels. The higher ocean freight rates that started the second quarter of 1999 continued their positive trend through the third quarter of 2000.

The anticipated crop production of approximately 10 billion bushels of corn and 2.77 billion bushels of soybeans comes at a time when the nation's farmers are experiencing the fourth year in a row of depressed grain prices. Low prices are almost certain to guarantee scarce storage space for fall corn and soybeans as producers and grain elevator operators will continue their reluctance to release grain to market.

While the major rail carriers are confident of providing adequate service, a sudden rise in grain prices could cause a surge in grain marketing efforts and an increase in the demand for rail transportation activity.

Although the Class I railroads serving North America have indicated that no substantial problems are anticipated in providing transportation services during the fall harvest and peak shipping season, both Union Pacific and Burlington Northern Santa Fe railroads have increased demurrage charges, or penalties for shippers who hold cars beyond the allotted free time to load them.

The truck situation is generally healthy, although diesel fuel prices and an ongoing labor shortage affecting the motor carrier industry could affect regional grain deliveries during the late harvest season.

This information was developed by USDA and the Surface Transportation Board. It is available on the Internet at www.ams.usda.gov/tmd/mta/index.htm. To obtain a copy of the report, contact Karla Martin, USDA-AMS-TMP-MTA, Room 1209-S, 1400 Independence Avenue, SW, Washington, DC 20250, (202) 690-1303, fax (202) 690-3616, or e-mail Karla.Martin@usda.gov.

Great Performers Of The Plant World Announced For 2001

PHILADELPHIA — The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society (PHS) announced winning plant selections for the 2001 Gold Medal Plant Award at a recent meeting of nursery and horticultural professionals.

The three top choices for best woody ornamental plant went to Cornus mas "Golden Glory" (Cornelian Cherry Dogwood); Hydrangea arborescens "Annabelle" (Smooth Hydrangea); and Ilex opaca (American Holly).

The Holly is the first species for which a number of outstanding cultivars have been recommended. Those cultivars include "Jersey Princess," "Old Heavy Berry," and "Satyr Hill."

The Gold Medal Plant Award program, begun in 1978, recognizes exceptional woody plants hardy in growing zones from New York to Washington, D.C. Home gardeners and nursery professionals will find all Gold Medal awardees excellent choices for landscaping, as these plants have been put through a rigorous evaluation, are outstanding garden performers, easy to come by, and make a terrific contribution to regional gardening efforts. To date, 73 plants have been awarded the "Gold Medal."

In an effort to raise awareness for Gold Medal Plant Award winners, PHS recently embarked on a promotional campaign to alert regional gardeners to sources and plant selections. A recent $375,000 multiyear grant to PHS from the Chanticleer Foundation, Wayne, will accelerate promotions throughout the tri-state area, bringing educational information about the Gold Medal Program to area retail garden centers where plants are readily available.

In announcing the grant, Christopher Woods, executive director of Chanticleer, noted the award's objective of providing home gardeners with reliable information on selecting outstanding plants that are little known. Chanticleer, home of many Gold Medal specimen plants, is the region's premiere pleasure garden and is open to the public April 1 through October. For information about Chanticleer, call (610) 687-4163.

8500 SERIES SMALL SQUARE BALER

HOLD ON TO MORE HIGH-PROTEIN LEAVES WITH THE CENTER-LINE DESIGN

With a Case IH 8500 Series Small Square Baler, your hay has a straight shot through the baler From pickup to bale chute, all Case IH balers feature the field-proven center-line design.

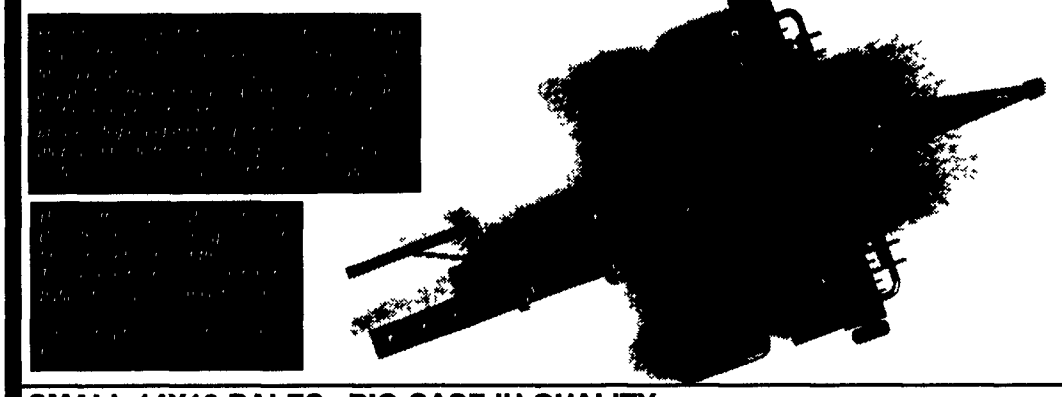
Other baler designs force hay to change directions or turn corners, which can cause leaves to shake off or tear loose, taking your feed value along with them. Fortuantely, the center-line design on Case IH balers helps your hay hang on to more of its protein rich leaves, giving you bales with more nutrition.

Here's how your hay becomes a solid bale built to stack like a brick: Hay enters the wide, low-profile pickup and meets plenty of crop-hungry tines Then centering augers gently feed it to the prepacker chamber Hay is swept in by a stuffer fork and compressed into a uniform flake

Next the preformed bale flake enters the bale chamber just ahead of the plunger. Each charge of the heavy-duty plunger makes one flake until a square-cornered bale is built

The result? Bales of consistent density and shape that pack a powerful nutritional payload. And you get rock-solid bales built for better stacking, storage and transport



SMALL 14X18 BALES...BIG CASE IH QUALITY

From the smallest 8520 to the medium-duty 8530 and the deluxe 8545, Case IH offers you three choices in the 14x18 in. (36x46 cm) bale category.

All models boast the advantages of a center-line design. It's a difference you'll quickly see in consistent bale quality as you get bale after bale of solid, stackable, tied-to-last bales.

These three models of balers get the job done right with wide, low-profile pickups, high-speed, short-stroke plungers, constant-velocity drivelines, and reliable knotters and twisters. A big-capacity twine box boosts productivity, while a standard bale counter tracks the day's progress

Optional features include: hydraulic density control, high-flotation tires, hydraulic pickup lift, wire tie version of the 8545, light kit for night baling, quarter-turn bale chute, the 8511 Bale Thrower, and a bale chute extension with wagon hitch. See Binkley & Hurst Bros. Today!

THE NEW CASE IH 8585 3'x4' SQUARE BALER
CASE IH MAXIMUM PAYLOAD. MINIMUM EFFORT.

Take advantage of the transportation and handling advantages of the new 8585 Large Square Baler from Case IH. For maximum payload with minmum loading effort, the new 3x4 foot bale size takes fewer bales to fill a flatbed, so you save time and keep trucks coming back for more hay

- Industry-leading 30-ball twine capacity means nonstop baling productivity.
- Six heavy-duty double knotters provide secure ties bale after bale.
- Hydraulic density control, high-flotation tires, and adjustable ejector are standard
- Automatic central lube system greases critical points to reduce downtime

DON'T BE SCAMMED BY TELEMARKETING FRAUD

Mark Goodson
Extension Agent
Agriculture
York County

Don't let this happen to you!

Phone rings. Person on the other end says you filled out a card at a meeting. That card, he says, constitutes an order for an herbicide. He wants your credit card number to complete the order.

You don't remember filling out the card, but he continues to give you the "hard-sell" pitch. The herbicide will take care of your worst weed problem, he promises. He tells you how to use it. Finally, you decide to finalize the order. Maybe you did fill out the card. Maybe it's worth a try. It's only around $100 a gallon, a low price to pay for getting rid of your multiflora rose problem once and for all.

When the product arrives, you apply the product the way the high-pressure telemarketer told you. It doesn't work the way he described. You read the label more carefully and find that you applied it incorrectly, excessively. Worse, you check the active ingredient and find that you paid 100 bucks per gallon for 12 percent 2, 4-D, 2, 4-DP or four percent MCPP. You could have bought the same thing at the hardware store for $15.

You feel embarrassed, scammed — you applied incorrectly, against the label. If you report the scam artist, might you be held accountable for going against the label? Either you decide to do nothing or you get angry enough to complain.

The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and the state attorney general's office chase down these complaints only to find an empty garage or an empty room at the end of their investigation. The state can't chase these scam artist across state lines and cooperation between states does not often lead to arrest.

The best advice — don't buy pesticides over the telephone, especially when approached.

Cattle Industry To Benefit From Vaccine Research

GROTON, Ct. — Work on a novel vaccine designed to combat two major causes of economic loss in the beef industry was presented recently during the second day of the first International Symposium on the Discovery of New Veterinary Medicines, hosted by Pfizer Global Research and Development.

Dr. Terecita Yule of Pfizer Global R & D Veterinary Medicine Discovery, based at Groton, Ct., told delegates that her team was in process of designing a novel vaccine to counter "The Two Rs" — inappropriate reproductive behavior and respiratory disease — known to be responsible for heavy economic loss.

Hormonally driven sexual and aggressive behavior, often manifested when cattle are moved to feed lots, can result in damaged hides and unwanted pregnancies. Bovine respiratory disease (BRD) is often triggered by movement of animals, sometimes in crowded conditions — so-called "shipping fever."

Combating these conditions has been problematic, explained Yule, only intermittently successful, and very expensive. In the U.S. she noted, of the money spent on livestock biologicals in 1999, 37 percent was in the cattle industry.

The Groton experts' work involves a new concept — a single product with a dual function, incorporating antigens relevant to both problems in a single vaccine — GnRH to counter hormonal problems and the bovine herpes virus vaccine BHV-1 to combat shipping fever.

The session on the theme Discovery of New Vaccines began with a presentation by Dr. Peter Doherty of St. Jude's Research Hospital, Memphis, Tenn. Doherty won the Nobel Prize for medicine in 1996 — the first and only veterinarian to do so — for his work on T-cell immunity. His address on cell mediated immunity in virus infections concentrated on the field of human health in which he now works, but had direct relevance to the development of cell mediated vaccines in veterinary medicine, on which many veterinary research teams are now engaged.

Other papers in the second day's session included two papers by researchers at the Moredun Research Institute, Edinburgh. A resume of prospects for vaccines against gastrointestinal nematodes in ruminants was presented by Dr. David Smith, and an overview of the development of iron-regulated protein vaccines against pasteurellosis by Dr. Willie Donachie.

Four Pairs Win At Triangle Series

NEW LONDON (Chester Co.) — Four horse and rider pairs won double High Point Awards for the Year 2000 in the Triangle Horse Show Series.

Awards were presented at a pig roast and dance held jointly with Gum Tree 4-H Club on Saturday, Nov. 18, at Grazing Acres in New London.

Double winners were Brooke Holloway of Kennett Square, riding Wrinkle in Time; Taylor Marcus of West Grove, riding One Last Trick; Bethany Moore of Landenberg, riding Indian Jane; and Sarah Shaffer of West Grove riding Low Down Louie.

Holloway was the top rider for the series in Advanced Short Stirrup, a division for riders aged 12 or younger, and in Baby Green Hunter, a division for horses and ponies in their first and second years of showing.

Marcus received her top awards in the mini division (for riders age 10 and under) and in beginner short stirrup. This pair also was second in high points in the pleasure pony division.

Moore was the top junior medal rider (the junior medal division tests advanced riding skills). Her mount was the top point winner in the pleasure horse division. This pair also placed second for the series in the western and low hunter division.

Shaffer received the top award for open equitation, which is based on the individual's riding ability, and showed her quarter horse to the top high point award in low hunter (in this division the horse, and not the rider, is judged).

Four farms sponsored the 2000 Show Series and a total of eight shows were conducted, with competitors accumulating points throughout the season. Sponsoring farms were KA Equestrian Center and Blue Goose Stable in Cochranville, Grazing Acres, and Fox Meadow in Unionville.

Call any of the participating farms to be placed on the mailing list for the 2001 Series: Grazing Acres: (610) 255-5009; KA Equestrian: (610) 869-0746; Fox Meadow: (610) 444-8805 Blue Goose: (610) 869-2233. The series is open to the public and new riders and new spectators are welcomed.

Receiving the Series High Point Award in Halter was Creme Brulee, shown by Lisa Thompson of Gap. Reserve in this division went to Butterfly Kisses, shown by Jessica Knox of Unionville. Knox also had the reserve high point award in the junior medals division.

High point rider in leadline was Anthony DiNenno of West Grove. Reserve high point rider in leadline was Monica DePaul.

In the mini mini division, for riders eight and under, the high point rider was Ciara Danese of Landenberg. Reserve high point rider in this division was Abby Miller of Kennett Square.

High point western horse was Eagle's First Love, shown by Lauren DiNenno of West Grove. Eagle's First Love was also reserve in high points for the pleasure horse division. Sister Jenna DiNenno showed the high point pleasure pony, Desert Fire Belle.

High point beginner rider was Kristen Deets of Coatesville. Reserve in this division was Emily Shaffer of West Grove.

FREE COMBINE INSPECTION!

A profitable harvest means getting all the crop possible from your field, clean and free from damage. When your combine was new, all the individual parts worked together as a team. Over many harvest seasons however, components have worn at varying rates, and the teamwork may have broken down. Those worn parts can drastically cut into your profit! But you can prevent grain damage, reduce loss, and keep profits high with our free on farm Combine Inspection. We'll inspect 22 different areas on your combine and give you a full list of items that need attention before your machine goes to the field again.You can have our factory trained service techs make all needed repairs, or we'll send you the parts needed for you to do the work yourself. Either way take advantage of our 180 days No Interest No Payment plan.

*Offer applies to Farm Plan Preferred Accounts with approved credit.

Geographic limitations apply, call your Deer Creek Customer Service rep for details.

FREE PARTS!

Deer Creek will ensure that critical, over-the-counter parts for your new John Deere Tractor, Combine, Sprayer or Forage Harvester will be in stock when you need them...or they're FREE! This includes maintenance parts and repair parts that can cause machine downtime and are replaceable within two hours, such as belts, batteries, bearings, filters, seals, pumps, and more. Why make such an offer? Because we're dedicated to keeping you up and running. That's a promise!

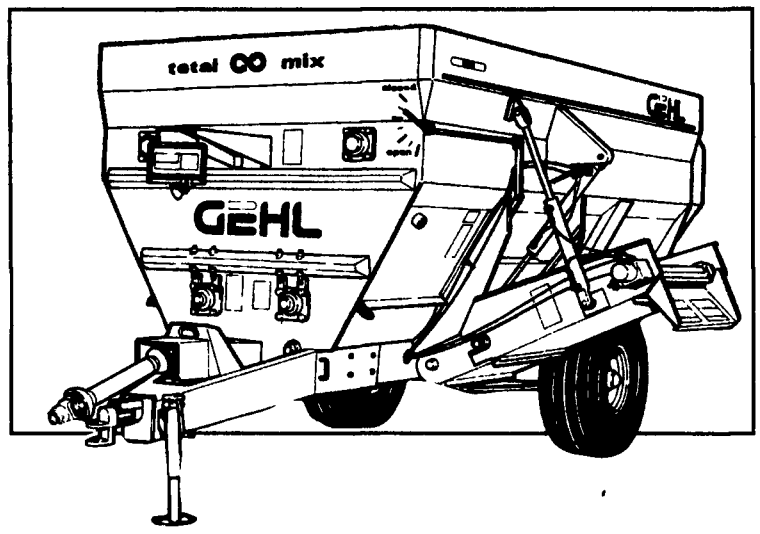
TMR "Total Mix" Mixer Feeders



"Total Mix" TMR mixer feeders let you mix more long-stemmed hay into your ration - up to 30% by weight depending on hay type and moisture content.
- "Hay - slicer auger" - Incorporates knife assemblies into the two bottom augers.
- Better mixing action - Four-auger design creates a double figure - 8 mixing pattern for fast and complete mixing of all feed ingredients.
- Energy efficient - Planetary drive system requires less horsepower.
- Built to last - Patented star couplers absorb shock loads by allowing the bottom augers to flex, providing long service life.
- Five sizes - 150 to 455 cubic feet capacities.

'Jersey Fresh' Promotes 4-H Market Lamb Program

FLEMINGTON, N.J. — The New Jersey Department of Agriculture promotes agriculture products grown in the state under the "Jersey Fresh" logo. While commonly used to market vegetable and fruit produce, the "Jersey Fresh" banner was prominently displayed at the 2000 State 4-H Market Lamb Sale as part of the Hunterdon County 4-H fair during the Labor Day Weekend.

Buyer supports for the 38 4-H market lambs that qualified was strong with a state record-breaking bid given by Bill Weaver of Valley High Stables for $75 per pound. Julie Meirs, 4-H'er from Mercer County, raised the market lamb.

Public Service Electric & Gas (PSE&G) purchased three lambs, including the grand champion raised by Stacy Kelly from Monmouth County. Purina Mills was the successful bidder on the reserve grand champion, raised by Erik Bramble of Gloucester County.

The 38 animals sold at the 2000 State 4-H Lamb Sale were the finished market lamb projects raised during the year by 4-H members from Burlington, Cape May, Gloucester, Hunterdon, Salem, Monmouth, Mercer, Somerset, and Warren counties in New Jersey.

Many of the market lambs purchased by local businesses or individuals are donated to nursing homes, hospitals, and food banks. In doing so, the financial support given by the private sector to this state 4-H event goes beyond the endorsement of a unique youth development program to assistance given to many local charities, according to Sherman Tomasino, Rutgers Cooperative Extension 4-H agent and coordinator for the State 4-H Market Lamb Sale.

Located on San Antonio's famous Riverwalk, the Henry B. Gonzalez Convention Center will host the combined convention and trade show of the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) and the American Soybean Association (ASA).

"Commodity Classic organizers have once again put together a first-class event bringing together the nation's top corn and soybean growers," said NCGA President Lee Klein. "This is a true opportunity for growers to improve their profitability."

Commodity Classic is the premier venue for growers to learn and network with leading innovators in crop production and agri-business industry representatives to improve their efficiency and profitability. Headlining this 2001 Commodity Classic evening of entertainment is the award-winning Oak Ridge Boys, one of America's best-known country acts.

Educational session topics include Variable Rate Application With Remote Sensing, Sprayer Nozzle Research and Grower Spraying Accuracy, Zone Tillage and Residue Management Equipment, Environmental Regulations That Will Make Growers Change Practices, Future of the Farm Bill, Grain Utilization and Export Outlook, Making a Family Farm a Family Business, and Marketing Grain on Your Own or Farming the LDP.

NCGA Calls For StarLink Decision Based On Sound Science

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The StarLink saga continued recently with a U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Scientific Advisory Panel (SAP) hearing to discuss Aventis' application for a temporary exemption for StarLink in food.

Rick Tolman, executive vice president and CEO of National Corn Growers Association (NCGA), said he association is urging EPA to make a decision based on sound science.

"It's in the best interests of our 32,000 members as well as all of U.S. agriculture and our international customers that EPA make this decision on sound science," said Keith.

'NCGA has always supported the strict and stringent U.S. regulatory process that approves the safety of biotechnology and other products. This is another step in the process and we're ready to support a decision based on hard data, not just a hot debate."

Tolman noted that the StarLink issue has neither hindered nor helped the development of biotechnology.

"Biotechnology still offers farmers and consumers opportunities to address key problems such as insect control in crop production and food processing," Tolman said. "For almost three years, the NCGA's position has been that farmers need access to this technology and to use it when and where it makes them more profitable."

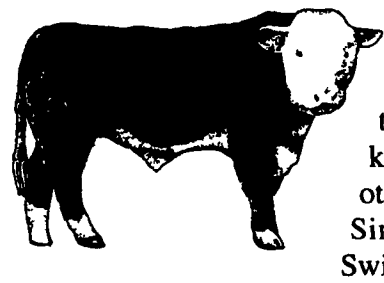
BEEF TIPS

Why are Simmentals so calm?



Simmental beef cattle are known for their gentle disposition. What are the scientific reasons that they are known for being calmer than other breeds?

Simmental cattle originate in Switzerland, where they were the "family cow" or "family oxen." It was the job of the family cow to give milk, pull the cart and ultimately, provide meat. Uncontrollable animals have been culled out of the breed for hundreds of years by the European family farmers. Today, we benefit from this history and it is another reason why many commercial cattlemen want Simmental genetics in their herd.

THE ADVANTAGES OF ROASTED CORN

* Earlier Harvest - Our roaster will dry corn down eight to ten points of moisture.

* Higher Digestibility - Research studies show that roasted corn is more digestible than high-moisture corn.

* Purer Feed - Our wet growing season has the potential of producing mold spores in standing corn that is harmful to livestock, swine and poultry. Our flame roaster can effectively remove mold spores.

Drier Total Ration - With less fermented feed. Supplementing the hay and corn silage diet with dry corn aids better rumin health.

Greater Profits - Dairy herds fed roasted corn advance two to eight lb. per cow in milk and improves herd health.

Beekeepers' First Experience: Lessons Learned, And Beeswax For The Effort

Tim Miller at the Henry Reist farm in Mount Joy checks out the stacks of "wet supers" that contain some honey residue after having been extracted.

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — It could be said that honey producer Tim Miller is torn between two loves — beekeeping and carpentry.

Actually, he may really be torn away from his first true love, beekeeping. Carpentry's the "bill-payer."

Tim, along with wife Kelly and family, has been immersed in beekeeping and honeymaking for more than half a decade.

But Tim's love for keeping bees goes back a long way.

The love of beekeeping could be something he simply inherited.

A great-grandfather, Martin Miller, used to have quite a few colonies of bees near Landisville in the mid-1910s. Not so long ago, Tim obtained a picture of Martin from Edna, Martin's daughter-in-law.

"We began beekeeping in 1994," said Tim, "but it wasn't until 1999 that we obtained the photo and had it restored."

If you look beyond the yellowing and marks of age on the photo, you could almost see that the man on the left, under the young tree, was quite proud of his bees. The Millers restored the photo, enlarged it to 8 by 10 inches, and displayed it in a frame.

(Now, the farm is Chatelaine Development off Nolt Road in Landisville.)

Kelly, president of the Lancaster County Honey Producers, enjoys using honey to bake. And she bakes a lot.

But she doesn't like honey eaten straight in its pure form.

It's too sweet. When the Millers decided to raise bees and process honey for their own products, "I didn't like honey," she said. "And I still don't."

But she has convinced her

SERVICE WITH A SMILE IS GOOD BUSINESS
William Lesser

There is a lot of talk in this country now about the "service economy."

What that means in practice is more of us are working (part time) at McDonald's and as supermarket checkers.

Such changes say a lot about the national economy, but here I want to emphasize what they say about service.

Service positions — working directly with the public, often at low-skill and low-salary positions — are not

'Growing In The New Millennium' Theme For 2001 Mid-Atlantic Fruit And Vegetable Convention

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — As the new millennium gets under way in 2001, fruit and vegetable growers need the latest information on growing techniques, pest control, nutrition, marketing, and business management.

There is no better place for growers in the Mid-Atlantic region to learn the latest in "Growing in the New Millennium" than at the 2001 Mid-Atlantic Fruit and Vegetable Convention in Hershey, Jan. 30 - Feb. 1.

About 2,000 people, mostly fruit and vegetable growers from throughout Pennsylvania, Maryland, New Jersey, and other states are expected to gather at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center for the convention.

The event is jointly sponsored by the State Horticultural Association of

Penn State Opens New Plasticulture Building

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Dr. Bill Lamont, Penn State associate professor of vegetable crops, spoke about the amazing foray into extending the season, growing crops for market earlier, and coming up with new farming opportunities.

But first he spoke about Penn State's newly constructed Tom Wentzler Building at the Center For Plasticulture during an Ag Progress Days' tour in August.

The building, headquarters for the center, houses equipment and monitoring technology for the 24 high tunnels at the site.

The building, measuring 24 feet square, was completed in June at a cost of about $13,000 from a monetary gift given to the project by Wentzler and other contributors.

(Turn to Page 8)

Dr. Mike Orzolek, professor of vegetable crops at Penn State, in center with hat, noted the technology produces a wonderfully colorful cut flower. The technology "opens up a large variety of opportunities," said Orzolek.

family that using honey to bake, with slight modifications, is healthier and more appealing than ordinary table sugar.

Tim grew up on a small farm in Landisville where his parents, Jim and Anne, cared for about 15 ewes, mostly for a lamb crop.

When Tim was about eight years old he found some old hives in the barn, and "it caught my curiosity," he said.

"It was only later that I would learn that those hives belonged to my great-grandfather Martin," Tim said.

In 1990, on a three-month home-repair mission trip to Kentucky with the Mennonite Central Committee, Tim had the opportunity to observe a beekeeper attending his hives.

"He took the time to discuss the different components of a hive," Tim said. "I'll never forget peering in at the queen as the beekeeper pointed it out to me. I found it all extremely fascinating. It was then that I began reading up on the subject."

He married Kelly in 1991, purchased the house near Manheim in 1993, and in the spring the following year, purchased his first package.

The package was a colony of about 12,000 bees and one queen from Georgia. The cost? About $48.

"He bought it just so he could watch and look at the bees flying around," said Kelly, with a laugh.

Tim purchased two more hives and captured a swarm, which he placed in a fourth hive in 1995. In the late summer that year, varroa mites killed all the hives. To add to the disappointment, he noted, the little bit of honey the Millers did manage

Some hives are kept at the home of Kelly and Tim Miller.

Bees, on ground, make their way into a new hive.

to harvest actually fermented.

"We learned quickly the importance of maintaining a proper moisture content in honey," Tim said. "Bees will not cap honey with a thin layer of wax until they have properly evaporated the moisture from the nectar, by fanning their wings. Since our bees were killed by mites, they had left much of the honey uncapped, which we extracted along with the rest."

Tim said it was their first harvest 'and we didn't want to waste anything."

Because high moisture content in honey allows for fermentation, "we ended up losing it all," he said.

Tim wrote in his business entry for 1995, "Oh well, some valuable lessons learned and some beeswax for the effort."

So in 1996 the Millers "started over" by purchasing two more packages of 12,000 bees. Since then, the numbers have continued to grow by collecting swarms, making splits (dividing one hive into two or more separate hives), and purchasing hives from fellow beekeepers.

Today Tim cares for about 100 colonies of about four million bees.

"He's classified as a part-time beekeeper," said Kelly. Part-timers manage 25-299 hives — yet even with those numbers, it is hard to make a living.

To make beekeeping a full-time occupation, Tim believes he would have to care for about 400 hives.

The development from egg to adult worker bee is 21 days, when she begins a life of labor for the colony.

One bee, noted Kelly, produces about 1/12 of a teaspoon in its lifetime. In the summertime, the life can be short — only about 6-8 weeks.

In building the hives, gathering nectar, and working for the queen, Kelly noted that a typical bee can "literally work itself to death."

Some of the best nectar comes from woodlots near flowering trees, especially in the early spring.

One of the first pollen sources is the maple tree.

Some of the Millers' hives are on vegetable and fruit production farms. One is a "pollination yard," Tim noted, on the nearby Nelson Heisey Orchard. Yards can have anywhere from two to 15 hives.

The past year wasn't a good year for honey production, mostly because of the cold, wet spring. "There were too many birds and not enough bees," Tim said, which resulted in a poor cherry crop.

Kelly noted that this year the locust trees didn't bloom on their property, so nectar was in really short supply.

In 1999, the average yield per colony was 76 pounds. With 11 colonies, last year the Millers harvested about 800 pounds of honey. This year the yield is down about 60 percent per colony.

Spring weather "makes or breaks" yields, said Tim.

Often, colonies of bees split from the main branch and "swarm." The old queen leaves and the new queen remains.

Sometimes "swarms" can attach themselves to anything — trees, telephone or fence posts, even on the ground. Up to 60 percent of the hive can actually leave in the swarms.

Tim and Kelly have photos of swarms they collected from all over the area.

One swarm was on the ground, in the grass. Tim merely placed a hive next to it and the bees simply marched right in.

One photo shows a fence post surrounded by a swarm. There have been stories of swarms literally attaching themselves to the spare tire in the back of sport utility vehicles — even construction barrel markers.

Kelly and Tim market the honey made from the hives under the Back Run Apiaries label, named after the Back Run Stream that feeds into the Little Chickies. Honey is packed into one- and five-pound bottles, including the squeeze bear plastic containers.

Colored waxes are made into decorative candles, including forest green and burgundy votives.

Honey can last a long time, noted Kelly. She read that some was found in unedible, granulated form in an Egyptian tomb.

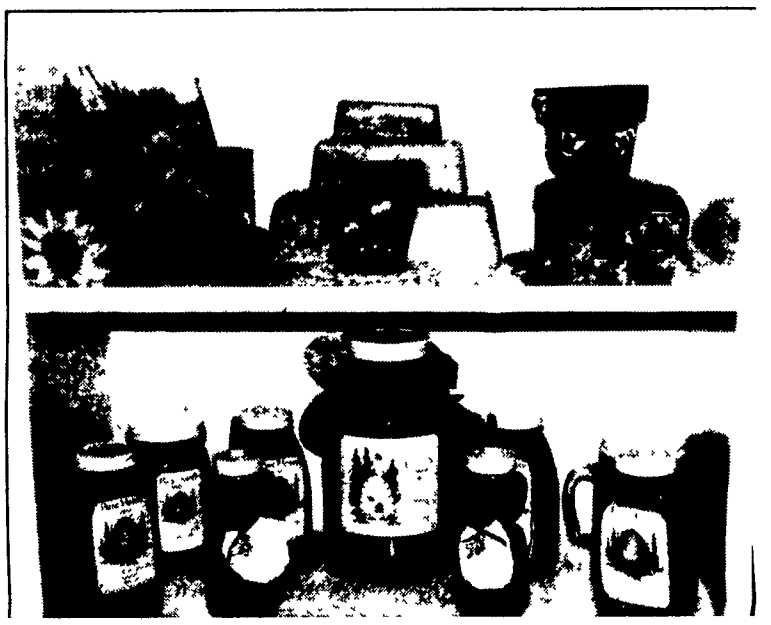
Kelly also managed a stand at the Landis Valley Harvest Days.

Kelly, president of the county beekeepers, said the association numbers about 35 members. They meet about six times per year.

Kelly and Tim are members of Landisville Mennonite Church, which they attend with children, Caleb, 7, in the second grade at Elm Tree Elementary; Elizabeth, in kindergarten at Elm Tree; Julia, 4; and Angela, 2.



The Millers market honey in one- and five-pound jars, along with an assortment of beeswax products.

Pennsylvania, the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association, the Maryland State Horticultural Society, and the New Jersey State Horticulture Society.

This year the fruit growers will be joined by peach growers from across the nation as the National Peach Council will conduct its annual meeting at the convention.

The Great American Hall at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center will host the Trade Show with more than 130 exhibitors. The trade show is again expected to be completely sold out.

Six or more concurrent educational sessions will be offered on all three days of the convention. The following sessions are planned for the first day: tree fruits (including light relations, varieties, postharvest handling and insect control topics), season extension technology, back to basics, labor management, promising vegetable crops, leafy greens and herbs, wholesale marketing, greenhouse vegetables, sweet corn, organic production, potatoes, and grapes.

On the second day, sessions will cover tree fruit, peaches (including plum pox virus topics), roadside marketing, irrigation, general vegetables, bedding plants/perennials, potatoes, alternative markets, small fruit, snap beans, and computer use.

The convention will close on the third day with sessions on peaches (including varieties, handling and fertigation topics),family business management, pumpkins, melons/cukes/squash, tomatoes (processing and stake), small fruit, cut flowers, fall ornamentals, marketing, and tree fruit insect identification workshop.

Besides the opportunity to attend the sessions of the National Peach Council, growers will have the option to attend three half-day workshop sessions. On the first day Norine Larson from Minnesota will present a workshop on "Managing Teen and Senior Workers." On the last day, Dr. Cindy Iannarelli of Bridgeville will present a morning workshop on "Keeping Your Family Business Peaceful and Profitable."

An afternoon workshop on identifying and monitoring tree fruit insect pests will also be offered. There is no extra fee for the workshops. In addition, sessions on computer use will be offered on the second day of the convention.

Many pesticide applicator update training credits are available to growers attending the sessions. The program covers nearly every aspect of fruit, vegetable, potato, and berry production. Commercial growers should not pass up this educational opportunity.

On the first evening, fruit and vegetable growers will be treated to a reception followed by the annual fruit and vegetable growers dinner. The dinner will include awards, recognitions, and entertainment by the United Voices of Praise from Messiah College. On Jan. 31, two receptions for growers will be held. The processing tomato growers with the highest yields for the 2000 season will be honored at the annual tomato awards luncheon on the closing day, Feb. 1.

For more information on the fruit program and registration, contact Maureen Irvin, State Horticultural Association of Pennsylvania, (717) 677-4184; William Tietjen, New Jersey State Horticultural Society, (908) 475-6505; or Robert Black, Maryland State Horticultural Society, (301) 271-7491.

For more information on the vegetable, potato or bedding plant program and registration, contact William Troxell, Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association, (717) 694-3596.

Persons registered for either the fruit or vegetable program can attend all the sessions offered (fruit, vegetable, and small fruit sessions) plus the trade show. Registration either through the mail or at the door is required to attend both the trade show and educational sessions.

Popular Pumpkins May Sprout New Snack Food Ideas

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Pumpkins are popular. American farmers have tripled planted pumpkin acreage since 1982 to meet rising demand in what is now estimated to be a $150 million per year industry.

Demand may grow even more, as new USDA-funded research help open new markets for hull-less pumpkin seeds.

"The rising popularity of urban pumpkin patches and fall festivals has helped spur demand for pumpkins and increase income for some farmers," said U.S. Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman. "Research holds the key to developing new and exciting products from this traditional symbol of fall."

The new strain of seed, developed by Dr. Brent Loy of the University of New Hampshire, will be promoted in North America for use in puffed snack products, granola products, trail mixes, sandwich spread, and a specialized oil.

Tiny pumpkin seeds are cholesterol free and loaded with vitamins and minerals. Seeds are rich in protein and unsaturated oil and contain significant zinc, potassium, and phosphorous.

There were 10,483 farms reporting 74,354 acres of pumpkins planted, according to the 1997 Census of Agriculture released last year. That is a significant increase from the 5,191 farms reporting 25,985 acres of pumpkins planted in 1982. The top pumpkin producing states are Illinois, New York, and California.

Gardeners Shouldn't Be In The Dark About Growing Potatoes

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Potato production has a long and rich history in Pennsylvania, but a vegetable expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences said you don't need to be a large grower to raise super tubers.

"Many people in rural areas grow potatoes in home gardens, but urban and suburban gardeners seem to shy away from home grown potatoes," said Bill Lamont, associate professor of vegetable crops. "Potatoes can be grown in a variety of sizes, shapes and colors, and there's nothing better than eating potatoes fresh from the garden."

Potatoes should be started in late March or early April. All potatoes are grown from seed pieces, in which a seed potato is halved or quartered so that each section retains at least one eye. The seed piece should weigh at least 1½ ounces.

"You can get seed potatoes at any garden center," Lamont said. "But to get gourmet or different varieties, check in seed catalogs or on the Internet."

Before planting, let the sliced sections sit five to seven days in a warm, humid place until the cut surface heals over and dries. Plant when the soil temperatures have been at a steady 50 degrees for at least a week.

Lamont recommends planting each seed piece at least 4 inches deep and 9 inches apart, leaving about 3 feet between rows to give the gardener room to work. When the plant has sprouted to about 6 inches, cover the plant with soil so that just the top foliage shows.

"This is called 'hilling' the potato," Lamont said. "Covering the plant with soil allows the plant to develop shoots that will form potatoes in the hilled soil."

Lamont said gardeners should not expect uniform growth from potatoes. "The eyes on a potato don't develop at the same time, so the plants will emerge at different times," he said.

Depending on the variety, potatoes take between 90 and 120 days to reach maturity. "You can dig potatoes at any time, though, depending on your taste," Lamont said. "If you like small potatoes, you can dig them well before 90 days are up."

Home gardeners should test soil before fertilization. Soil test kits are available for a nominal fee at any Penn State Cooperative Extension county office. Lamont recommends using a 10-10-10 fertilizer if the garden has been well fertilized. If the garden has not been fertilized, Lamont recommends a 5-10-10 fertilizer. "Don't grow potatoes in the same location year after year," he said.

"A 3-year rotation should be fine."

Too much moisture can limit potato growth, but plants should be watered regularly. Lamont recommends using drip irrigation tape to reduce moisture on leaves. "Excess moisture can cause late and early blight to develop," he said.

Potatoes are mature when the plant foliage has naturally died. Gardeners should wait two weeks after vine dieback to harvest. "The wait allows the skins to set and reduces skin peeling, bruising and rot in storage," Lamont said. "Dry the potatoes for 3 or 4 days in a warm shady spot before storing. Potatoes exposed to sun and high temperatures will turn green and rot."

Potatoes are subject to several severe diseases that require either chemical applications or other controls. "When using fungicides and pesticides, be sure to follow all directions and precautions on the label," Lamont cautioned.

• Early Blight: This foliage disease shows brown circular spots in a target pattern. Contrary to its name, early blight usually occurs in mid- to late growing season. It develops quickly in warm, damp weather and can be controlled with fungicides.

• Late Blight. Late blight can occur at any time in the growing season under favorable conditions such as cool nights, rainy periods, dews, fog or humidity levels above 90 percent. The disease is commonly passed on from potatoes planted the previous season. "Plant healthy seed potatoes and destroy all potatoes from the previous season," Lamont said.

Other diseases include common scab, which often can be controlled using certified seed and watering consistently; and viral diseases, which can be controlled using certified seed and by controlling insects, which often spread viruses.

• Colorado Potato Beetle: These foliage feeders can be controlled by pesticides, although gardeners can control small plots by picking adults off leaves. The beetles lay bright orange eggs on the underside of potato leaves, and Lamont recommends smearing the egg masses. "Crop rotation reduces potato beetle populations as well," he said.

• Leafhoppers: Leaf hoppers suck plant juices out of the undersides of leaves. Gardeners can use pesticides recommended for this insect.

Scholarship Awarded

GENEVA, N.J. — Rebecca Scott, a senior at Cornell University from Cornwall, N.Y., received a $1,000 scholarship from Valent BioSciences Corporation during the Cornell Fruit Field Day 2000 Aug. 17.

The scholarship was awarded in conjunction with the New York State Horticultural Society.

Scott, who has worked at the Hudson Valley Laboratory in Highland, N.Y., hopes to become an extension educator in fruits after she graduates.

"It was the community that surrounded me in the fruit industry when I was working at the Hudson Valley Lab that encouraged me to continue on," she said.

Regina Rieckenberg, of Valent BioSciences, and Kevin Bowman, president of the New York State Horticultural Society, presented the check to Scott.

Candidates for 2001 can be nominated through the NYS Hort Society. Contact Kevin Bowman at (315) 787-2404 for more information.

Pennsylvania Christmas Trees To Adorn The White House

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — State Agricultural Secretary Samuel E. Hayes Jr. commended Pennsylvania Christmas tree farmers Darryl and Amy Bowersox, Hill View Tree Farm, Middleburg, Snyder County, and Paul and Sharon Shealer, Evergreen Acres Christmas Tree Farm, Auburn, Schuylkill County, for being selected as co-grand champions of the National Christmas Tree Contest.

Their grand champion trees will be on display in the White House during the next two Christmas holiday seasons.

"These two winning Christmas Trees, each from Pennsylvania farms, demonstrate the excellence for which Pennsylvania agriculture is known," Hayes said. "Placing a Christmas tree in the Executive Mansion during the holiday season is an honor that is unparalleled for Christmas tree growers. To have a Pennsylvania tree selected for the next two Christmases, in both 2000 and 2001, is doubly special."

The consecutive Washington, D.C., appearance of the award-winning trees are the result of the association's winners being selected at biennial rather than annual meetings. During the two years between meetings, national growers enter competitions in their respective states, and those winners become finalists at the national competition.

The two Pennsylvania entries came as the result of winning the 1999 and 2000 grand champion Christmas tree awards at the Pennsylvania Farm Show, conducted each January in Harrisburg.

More than 1,000 growers in attendance at the national meeting in Rochester, N.Y., cast votes for the anonymously labeled candidates. The two Pennsylvania entries won.

"The recognition of the high quality of Pennsylvania trees by fellow national growers acting as judges reflects the excellence of Pennsylvania Christmas trees," Hayes said. "Pennsylvania agriculture salutes the Bowersox and Shealer Christmas tree farms for their success in winning this highly competitive and nationally recognized award."

Sustainable Vegetable Production Book Available

ITHACA, N.Y. — Successful vegetable farmers do much more than produce vegetables. They also manage money, people, and natural resources effectively.

A new book from NRAES, the Natural Resource, Agriculture, and Engineering Service, can broaden the knowledge and guide the planning of those who grow vegetables or are considering beginning a vegetable production business.

"Sustainable Vegetable Production from Start-Up to Market," NRAES-104 introduces the full range of processes for moderate-scale vegetable production using ecological practices that minimize the need for synthetic inputs and maximize stewardship of resources. The book includes in-depth profiles of 32 vegetable producers.

"Sustainable Vegetable Production from Start-Up to Market" provides practical information on such essential matters as selecting a farm site; planning and record keeping; marketing options; and systems for starting planting, protecting, and harvesting crops. The 280-page book is enhanced by 91 illustrations, 36 sidebars, and 20 tables.

Individual chapters cover fundamental aspects of economic and environmental sustainability. Initial chapters address principles and practices essential to planning and launching a business: the practical implications of sustainability, getting started, farm business management, and marketing. The chapters that follow discuss essential production processes, focusing on soil fertility, composting, crop rotation, cover crops, tillage equipment and field preparation, seeds and transplants, irrigation and spraying systems, harvest and postharvest handling, season extension, integrated pest management, and environmentally friendly strategies for managing insects, diseases, weeds, and wildlife.

A final chapter profiles the experience of individual vegetable growers and provides their enterprise budgets for a number of crops. The grower profiles offer real-life examples of how farmers think about and deal with specific conditions. Appendixes include additional information resources, sources of supplies, a work sheet for developing vegetable enterprise budgets, vegetable crop nutrient recommendations, and useful conversions and calculations. A glossary and references are also include.

"Sustainable Vegetable Production from Start-Up to Market" was written by Vernon P. Grubinger, vegetable and berry specialist for University of Vermont Extension and director of the University of Vermont Center for Sustainable Agriculture.

Recommended for anyone concerned with the balance between crop production and stewardship of resources, "Sustainable Vegetable Production from Start-Up to Market" is a valuable resource for aspiring and beginning vegetable growers, experienced growers, extension personnel, and serious gardeners, and a useful text for college-level vegetable production chores.

"Sustainable Vegetable Production from Start-Up to Market" NRAES-104 is priced at $42 per copy, plus shipping and handling and sales tax. New Plasticulture Center Building Opens

The center was established in 1998 as a clearinghouse for research and educational efforts in the field of plasticulture.

According to Lamont, the project is attempting to come up with best management practices (BMPs) to use in the construction of the houses and the use of the houses to extend the season, provide early grown produce, and to supply produce off-season.

The high tunnel, he said, is not a greenhouse, "though it looks like it," he said. It's a nonpermanent structure that can be moved.

The tunnel creates a "microenvironment" that supplies protection from wind, cold temperatures, and other elements that can be detrimental to vegetable, fruit, and ornamental production.

Commercially, high tunnels are available in sizes ranging from 14-, 17-, and 21-feet wide to about 96 feet long. The tunnels at the center at Rockspring measure about 17 by 36 feet long.

The tunnels allow growers to pick in the rain, provide a constant supply all along, and extend the season. The downside: the conditions can be ideal for powdery mildew development and insect controls need to be implemented.

Tunnels have been installed in many southeast portions of the state, including Lancaster, Dauphin, and Bucks counties. Additional ones have gone into Elk County and others.

The 17-foot by 36-foot buildings took about a day to install with four people at a cost of about $1,200 each. The structure is designed to last 25-30 years and the plastic about four years.

Some who use the technology believe that tomatoes, for instance, last 5-8 days longer on the shelf than field-produced product.

One at Penn State houses tomatoes on a Florida-weave stake and prune system. Another houses okra.

Some houses have been equipped with a specially designed access door on both ends. A drip irrigation system is installed to allow precise watering. Penn State also plans to purchase a couple of hives of bees to help in pollination.

"The technology is a useful tool — and what you want to do is make money," Lamont said.

Dr. Mike Orzolek, professor of vegetable crops at Penn State, noted the technology produces a wonderfully colorful cut flower.

The technology "opens up a large variety of opportunities," said Orzolek.

Ag Plastics Use Grows Throughout World

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Use of plastics in agriculture has increased about 60 percent in less than a decade, according to a plasticulture expert.

Jean-Pierre Jouet, general secretary of the International Congress for Plastics In Agriculture (CIPA), said that in 1991, about 1.145 million cubic metric tons of plastic were in use in the world.

By 1999, that number had risen to 2.847 million cubic metric tons.

Jouet spoke on the first of a two-day 15th International Congress for Plastics In Agriculture at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center, Hershey, at the end of September.

Simultaneously, because of improved plastics engineering and production, energy consumption in greenhouse and other areas has been reduced by 90 percent, noted Gene Giacomelli, professor at the University of Arizona at Tucson.

According to Giacomelli, since the last international congress was hosted in the U.S. — the seventh congress in San Diego in 1977 — the energy reduction has amounted to about 90 percent through adaptation and further refinement of ag plastics technology.

And we did all that, he said, during a national energy crisis.

"If we had another energy crisis, could we reduce this further?" noted Giacomelli. "Our predecessors had it easy. This becomes a major challenge."

Since 1977, energy requirements have been reduced to 1.1 liter from 9.9 liters. That 1.1 liters or less represents .2 gallons per square foot.

In 1977, according to Giacomelli, San Diego County, Calif., was the largest user of ag plastics in the U.S., with more than three quarters used for irrigation and water-related needs.

Today, plastic polymers for all forms of irrigation are prevalent throughout the U.S. and the world.

In the world, low tunnels make up 402,000 hectares or 992,940 acres, according to Jouet. In 1991, for the U.S., that represented only 3,400 hectares, which grew to 5,000 hectares or 12,350 acres, by 1999. Africa uses 80,000 hectares or 197,600 acres. But the largest user is Asia, at 170,000 hectares or 419,900 acres.

Direct covers make up 86,000 hectares in the world. More direct covers are used in Europe than any other part of the world, noted Jouet, at 60,000 hectares or 148,200 acres.

Mulch uses for plastic in the world comprise 4.53 million hectares or 11.19 million acres. The U.S. only uses 75,000 hectares, about 185,250 acres. China makes up 44 percent of total world plastic mulching use, maybe even more, noted Jouet, at 2 million hectares (4.94 million acres).

Plastic for silages and other material, including wraps and bags, amounts to 540,000 metric tons. The U.S. uses 300,000 metric tons. Europe uses about 190,000 metric tons.

In the world, hydroponics comprises about 17,900 hectares or 44,213 acres. U.S. only has about 250 hectares or about 617 acres in hydroponics.

Microirrigation plastic use in the world encompasses 2.5 million hectares or 6.17 million acres. The U.S. has about 1.076 million hectares or about 2.65 million acres.

About 204,000 metric tons of plastic for twine hay and straw are used in the world. Other application of plastic for screens, nets, windbreaks, and other uses comprises 24,000 metric tons, noted Jouet.

The two-day conference included about 266 registered from agriplastic industries and organizations throughout the world. Demonstrations were conducted at the Milton Hershey School Horticultural Center the Sunday before.

CHOOSING MULCH COLORS FOR VEGETABLE PRODUCTION

Which color mulch should you use for vegetable production on your farm? The answer to that question is — it depends.

Color choice depends upon the crop you are growing and the season you are growing it. Mulch color choice can also depend upon whether you are seeking insect or disease control effects from the mulch.

In this article I will report on some of the papers presented by researchers from around the world at the International Congress For Plastics In Agriculture conducted late September in Hershey.

Let's start by reviewing a little of the history of plastic mulches and vegetable production.

Plastic mulches were first developed back in the 1960s. The early plastic mulch colors were black, white, or clear. Black was used for early crop production, especially in areas with cool spring temperatures. White was used in areas with hot summers since black and clear would cause soil temperatures to become excessive.

Another limitation in the use of clear mulch for vegetable production is weed growth under the mulch. However numerous benefits from plastic mulches were found in vegetable production. Plastic mulches increased yields and vegetable quality by conserving moisture, keeping soil from splashing on the crop, increasing or decreasing soil temperatures (depending on mulch color), reducing the leaching of nutrients, and preventing weed competition.

Then, in the mid-'80s, the development of colored mulches arose. Dr. Dennis Decoteau, chair of the horticulture department at Penn State (but then a researcher at Clemson University) wondered if light reflected by a mulch would affect plant growth. Building upon work observing the effects of various colors of light on the growth of ornamental plants, Decoteau collaborated with a researcher from the USDA and developed the first colored mulch. This now famous red mulch resulted in higher early-season yields of tomatoes. By the 1990s, numerous colored mulches were developed and marketed.

A recurring problem with colored mulches has been variable effects on vegetable production. One cause of this problem is the result of the lack of "standards" for these colored mulches. The first red mulch was developed specifically for its light-reflecting properties. Unfortunately, other colored mulches have generally not been developed with this specific quality in mind. Additional red mulches have even been marketed with different light-reflecting properties than the original. This inconsistency is part of the problem facing you, the grower, when trying to choose a mulch color for vegetable production.

Another problem you face is that even the specific light-reflecting mulches may not show any advantage over black mulch under ideal growing conditions. Still another problem with colored mulches is that once the crop develops and covers the mulch, any benefits from reflected light are lost. So should you abandon the idea of colored mulches and just use black? I would discourage you from this choice based on some of the presentations I heard at Hershey.

Let's first discuss the use of red mulch. Tomatoes are generally regarded as the crop most likely to respond to this color mulch. Studies from Pennsylvania showed increased yields in tomatoes in 2 of 3 years with red mulch while red increased yields in 3 of 5 sites in Iowa over a 2-year study. Variable weather conditions between seasons and locations was cited as a cause of the variation in response seen in both states.

Additional mulches giving higher yields in tomatoes were silver and IRT 100. Another potential benefit from red mulch that was observed in Pennsylvania was a reduction in the occurrence of early blight, but we'll talk more on this later.

Peppers responded best to nonreflective silver mulch in two separate studies in Pennsylvania. Green IRT and red UV mulch also increased yields for one year and blue mulch was beneficial one year but not the next. In New Jersey, pepper yields were also highest both for early harvest and total harvest on flat-reflective silver. Other types of silver mulches also gave higher yields in the New Jersey study compared to black.

A Virginia researcher reported that there were no differences in yield between watermelons grown on red or black mulches but both mulches were better than bare soil. Research in Pennsylvania has shown higher yields in cucurbits from blue mulches, so if you would want to try an alternate mulch color, I would start with blue.

Bill Lamont from Penn State reported that all mulches combined with trickle irrigation were better for potatoes than bare soil. Highest marketable yields were obtained with red and silver mulch for Dark Red Norland and similar results were seen with NY 101 (Keuka Gold).

Researchers working with leek in Belgium found that the best crop (10 percent weight increase) was produced using white mulch. They noted more even soil temperatures than with bare soil as well as more even moisture under all mulches.

Another cool season crop — radicchio — was grown on white, silver, red, black, clear, and blue mulch in New York. Heads were smallest on blue and bare soil and overall yields were best on white and silver, especially compared to bare soil. Since both of these cool-season crops responded best to mulches that tend to lower soil temperatures, I would suggest that you try these colors of mulch on other cool-season vegetables.

Researchers in Georgia reported that all mulches, even white on black, decreased growth and yield of tomato during the summer. Mulches resulted in soil temperatures that were harmful to root growth under Georgia's summer conditions. While we generally do not have the extremely high summer temperatures in Pennsylvania that they experience in the south, I advise you to be cautious using dark mulch during plant establishment in the summer months. You could increase soil temperatures too much for root growth even here.

The use of black mulch, however, is beneficial in the early production of warm-season crops. Researchers in Mexico reported that the highest yields of muskmelon established early in the season were found on black plastic. Most growers have al-necessarily service. We have much to learn about real service from the Europeans and others.

In France, for example, service is a skilled, respected career. In fact, what is so renowned about expensive French restaurants, besides the food, is the service. There is none of the proverbial French snootiness. The entire staff greets you by name at the door. You feel like a welcome guest, not a customer.

This attention works as well in New York as in Paris. Following a $10 lunch near Roscoe, the French proprietress thanked my wife and me personally and shook our hands.

Did I remember that effort and will I go back?

What does this have to do with marketing agricultural products?

The universal point is that we all like to be fussed over, to be made to feel important. This is true whether we are buying a fancy dinner, a truckload of tomatoes, or a single cucumber. Here I am not referring to the proverbial joking of the salesman, but to working at being considerate of your customers.

Try to remember something personal about them: preferences, family events, sports teams followed. If this does not come readily, then write something down when a transaction is completed and study your notes in idle minutes. Instilling a real service mentality in employees is difficult, but remember that example is the best teacher.

Perhaps what really characterizes service is sincerity. If I serve you because service and your satisfaction are important to me, that is sincere. If I put up a purchased sign saying, "Our Customers Are Number One," and everyone around me has the same sign, that isn't sincere. And, all in all, sincerity is tough to fake.

Service, real service, is good business. It just needs to be done and to be felt, not only talked about.

ready discovered this benefit of black mulch and use it to produce many vegetables for the early market.

Researchers in New Hampshire found no difference in early tomato yield between plants grown on red and black mulch. However, when they laid white mulch between the row middles for both mulch colors, they observed higher yields with black mulch. This was only for one year and the study was going to be repeated but it points to a possible method of increasing yields using reflected light. Hopefully, further studies will see if this effect is repeatable as well as if it can be increased further using different colors and, if so, if it is economically feasible.

There can also be a reduction in diseases and insects from selecting different colored mulches. I mentioned earlier that tomatoes grown on red mulch had a lower incidence of early blight. Researchers in Florida reported increased yields of tomato grown on silver mulch because of a reduction in tomato spotted wilt virus. Other researchers have observed less virus infections on squash grown on silver mulch. This is believed to be a result of the mulch confusing the insects that spread the virus because of its reflective properties. Instead of landing and feeding, the reflected light causes them to continue flying past the crop.

Yellow is known to attract some insect pests and has actually been used in IPM programs in squash. The outer rows in a field are planted on yellow mulch and then only these rows are sprayed since insects entering the field are drawn there. Researchers have reported significant saving from reduced spray applications using this method to "trap" insect pests. The researchers in Belgium also used colored mulches treated with glue to capture thrips in their study on leek production. They found a lower number of thrips on leeks grown on treated mulches of colors attractive to insects (yellow and blue) than on leeks grown on bare soil.

On a related note, researchers in Israel reported that by using various-colored plastic shade nets they were able to obtain dramatic effects on growth and flowering of several types of cut flowers. This technology might eventually find a use in the production of vegetable transplants.

While the center pivot design of the 1340 gives you unmatched maneuverability, 16 high speed swingaway knives keep you moving through damp hay and tough spots. You'll cut drying time too with the long 110-inch conditioner rolls.

Save maintenance time, too.

From the specially designed gearbox to sealed cutterbed bearings to reversible knives, the 1340 is designed for low maintenance.

Come in today and see how the 1340 cuts tough haying jobs down to size.

NEW HOLLAND

Building on a good thing

You might recognize the engines, drivelines and axles on the new New Holland TS tractors. They have excellent reputations based on past performance. Thousands of customers have put these components to hard use and benefited from their performance and durability.

So, New Holland wasn't about to change a good thing. They made other improvements to these 70- to 90-PTO-hp tractors instead – like increasing the horsepower, improving the comfort of the cab, relocating the fuel tank for added convenience, adding a top road speed of 25 mph, upgrading the electrical system and adding outlets and modernizing the styling.

Better see these exciting 70- to 90-PTO-hp TS tractors for yourself. And find out how good design can become even better.
